Korea Deal Hinted as Reds Retreat

U. N. Invites Chinese Reds To Debate on Korean Issue

Austin Calls Bid A Summons to Explain Peiping's Breach of Border

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

LAKE SUCCESS, Nov. 8. The Security Council, in a bewildered and anxious mood, today asked Communist China to send representatives to its debates on the movement of its troops into North Korea.

The United States and the Soviet Union voted together in favor of the request, although Ambassador Warren R. Austin, leader of the American delegation, insisted it was not so much an invitation as a "summons" to explain the facts.

"The people of the world do not want a general war," said Austin gravely. "Probably there is no emotion that stirs their hearts more deeply than this overwhelming desire to avoid an extension of the fighting outside of Korea.

"But the present facts which are before the Council could be interpreted as a provocation to general war."

The invitation to the Peiping government, proposed by Britain, won eight votes on the 11-nation Council. Cuba and Nationalist China opposed, with Egypt abstaining.

A Chinese Communist delegation is already believed to be in Moscow, ready to come here, in response to an earlier invitation from the Security Council to attend the discussions after November 15 on alleged American "aggression" in Formosa.

Secretary General Trygve Lie cabled Peiping this morning that visas for the group were ready in Prague, where the Chinese had intended to take a plane for New York. Only the Chinese and their Soviet friends in Moscow know how soon the Communist spokesmen will come.

But this evening, after the Security Council meetings, Lie sent another message to Peiping announcing the new invitation and urging quick acceptance.

In the meantime, Ambassador Austin today urged that the Security Council not let its business wait upon the arrival of the "witnesses" from Peiping.

"They may not come for a long while," he said, "and the threat that hangs over us is very serious.

Accordingly, the United States delegation intends to submit a resolution Thursday that would (1) call upon the Chinese Communists to withdraw their troops from Korean soil, (2) assure them once more that United Nations members have no aggressive designs upon Chinese territory, and (3) invite them to make use of any U. N. agencies or commissions on

Gallup Poll Clicks; 'Eating Pheasant Instead of Crow'

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Gallup Poll, which went astray in the 1948 elections, was back on the beam today—its forecast borne out by yesterday's balloting.

As a result, the Gallup people said they are "eating pheasant instead of crow."

They ate crow when they picked Gov. Thomas E. Dewey over President Truman in 1948.

Before yesterday's election, the American Institute of Public Opinion, as the Gallup Poll is known, said the Democrats would win 51 percent of the House of Representatives and the Republicans 49 percent.

First Battle Of Jets Won By U. S. Aces

UNITED STATES FIFTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 8 (AP).—American pilots today won history's first death battle of jet planes—fought at a breath-taking 600-plus miles an hour.

A United States F-80 Shooting Star jet shot down one Russian MIG-15 in a five-minute battle. Another Communist jet was damaged badly.

No American planes were hit.

The battle was waged at 20,000 feet near Sinuiju in northwest Korea—across the border from Red Manchuria.

Lieut. Russell Brown, Pasadena, Calif., pilot of the Shooting Star that knocked down the MIG-15, said it exploded.

The fight involved four United States F-80s and five to seven MIG-15s, said Maj. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, Fifth Air Force commander.

Maj. Evan G. Stephens, San Angelo, Tex., flight leader, said he chased the damaged jet, but it

Blair Killings Described to Grand Jury

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The Blair House killings and the attempted assassination of President Truman were described to a Federal grand jury yesterday.

Pressing for a first-degree murder indictment against Oscar Collazo, Puerto Rican Nationalist, the Government produced 12 witnesses to give their versions of the shooting.

At the same time, in Gallinger Hospital, surgeons removed a bullet from the wounded Collazo's shoulder.

White House guard Leslie Coffelt and Collazo's confederate, Griselio Torresola, were killed in the gun battle on the steps of Blair House in the middle of the afternoon of November 1.

A surprise witness was the cab driver who dropped Collazo and Torresola at Blair House, John Gavounas, 53, 432 Massachusetts ave. nw. His identity was previously unknown.

Gavounas told reporters he picked up the two revolutionaries at North Capitol st. and Massachusetts ave., at approximately 1:45 p. m.

In perfect English, Collazo ordered Gavounas to "17th st. and Pennsylvania ave. northwest," the cab driver said, but the two spoke

Plan to Talk to President Lands Man in Gallinger

A man who said he wanted to talk to President Truman about the election returns was picked up by the Secret Service yesterday at a White House gate.

He gave his name as George Glover Gaston and said he was a 64-year-old resident of Durham, N. C. He carried an unloaded Luger pistol.

Secret Service agents turned him over to police, to be sent to Gallinger Hospital for observation. He told police about his desire to see Mr. Truman on the election.

Communists Pull Back For 4th Day

U. S. B-29s Raze City on Border; Foe's Withdrawal Puzzles Yanks

SEOUL (Thursday), Nov. 9 (AP).—A United States Eighth Army spokesman today said Red Chinese troops may be avoiding a fight in North Korea pending high-level diplomatic moves that would affect the course of the Korean war.

Both in the northwest, where they face the Eighth Army, and in the northeast, where the U. S. Tenth Corps is located, the Communists have been pulling back.

The withdrawal in the northwest has been gradual over a four-day period.

In the northeast, a Tenth Corps spokesman said the Chinese 184th Division was "in retreat" from the giant Changjin hydroelectric complex.

He said U. S. Marines have not been in contact with the Reds for two days, but cautiously had not followed the Red pullback.

Northwestern patrols have not been able to locate the main body of Chinese and North Korean forces.

But the South Korean Seventh Division attacking toward Won, in the northwest sector 6 miles north of Kunu, ran into heavy mortar and automatic fire a mile and a half from the town.

"It is a very puzzling situation," a staff officer said. "The war is now in a strange phase in which diplomatic moves perhaps are as important as military moves."

U.N. Positions Strengthened

However, the Eighth Army spokesman said the United Nations forces were in the process of strengthening their positions along the Chongchon River, 42 miles north of Pyongyang. He said the conduct of the campaign was not being dictated by diplomatic moves in the U.N.

The spokesman suggested two posible reasons for the lack of aggressiveness by the Reds:

1. The Reds may be regrouping for offensive action.

2. Evidence that the Communists center of the line.

have shifted more strength to the

But, he emphasized, at no point on the Eighth Army's northwestern Korea front has there been any major contact with the enemy in the past four days.

Most of the northwestern fighting, he said, was being done far behind front lines where Red units were being mopped up in isolated operations.

Across the peninsula, the 10th Corps announcement that the Chinese Reds were "in retreat" in the northeastern area followed small gains by that corps' South Korean Capital Division and the United States Seventh Division.

The South Koreans were within 100 miles south of the Soviet border. The Seventh Division was on the forty-first parallel, about 24 miles south of the Manchurian frontier town of Hyesanjin.

A fast United States carrier task force ranged the entire breadth of North Korea south of Manchuria in search of military targets. Long naval guns routed 1000 Reds holed up on Ounmi Island, nine miles across the bay from Wonsan port, main supply base for the northeastern Allied forces.

The lull in the fighting and the Red pullbacks continued after Wednesday's smashing air attacks against Korean cities, towns and villages fronting the Manchurian border.

British Commonwealth troops on the northwestern front advanced 2 miles and found "evidence of a hasty withdrawal" by

Searchers Find All 22 Dead In Wrecked Plane in Montana

BUTTE, Mont., Nov. 8 (U.P.).—A search party today reported all 22 persons dead aboard a Northwest Airlines plane that crashed into a snow-covered mountain yesterday.

Searchers reached the wreckage and reported all 18 passengers and four crew members were killed by the impact of the crash against an 8300-foot peak three miles east of Butte.

A helicopter pilot said only the tail assembly could be seen jutting from the rocky peak about 100 yards from the crest of the mountain and radioed:

"No doctor needed, but need 22 body bags."

Eight of the victims were women, including two stewardesses, and two were children.

A coroner at the scene said it would "be difficult" to identify the bodies. Searchers immediately started to remove the bodies from the burned wreckage.

All 48 Found Dead In Wreckage in Alps

CHAMONIX, France, Nov. 8 (U.P.)—An airliner that crashed Friday on 15,000-foot Mt. Blanc exploded and burned, killing all the 48 aboard, Alpine guides reported today.

A climbing party reached the wreckage today and radioed that no one had survived the crash. A few mail bags were all that could be salvaged.

Forty-two passengers and six crewmen were aboard the four-engined Constellation, chartered from Air India for a flight from India to Britain. All were Indians or Pakistanis except the English pilot.

In Face of Vote

Resignation Plan Denied By Acheson

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Acheson, the target in a multitude of victorious Republican Congressional campaigns, yesterday declared that he had "no intention whatsoever" of resigning.

At the same time, he told a press conference that he hoped and believed the Republican gains in Congress would have no effect on the conduct of foreign policy. He said he did not expect any more difficulty than in the past in obtaining enactment by Congress of foreign policy legislation.

Studies Soviet Proposal

Turning away from political to substantive matters in the field of foreign affairs:

1. Acheson said his department was giving careful consideration to a Russian proposal for a Council of Foreign Ministers' meeting on the demilitarization of Germany, but voiced the liveliest doubts on the sincerity of the Russian suggestion. He indicated he would take his time as to whether the Russians had a genuine desire to reach an agreement, or were merely propagandizing.

2. He intimated, albeit in a somewhat doubt-provoking fashion, that the United States had not given the Chinese Communists assurances that no attempt would be made to cut off or injure their Manchurian electric power supply generated on the Yalu River.

To a direct question on whether assurances had been given, Acheson said his department had no official contact with the Chinese Reds. When he was asked if there had been assurances given by some other route, Acheson replied only that he knew of none.

3. The Secretary scoffed at Russian claims that there are no regular Chinese Communist soldiers in Korea, but only volunteers.

Attributed to Vishinsky

That statement, attributed to Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky, did not jibe with Acheson's information, he said. He added that he was reminded of a story about Lord Curzon, who was once approached by a man who said to him, "Mr. Smith, I believe?"

Curzon replied, "If you believe that, you would believe anything."

So it was with Vishinsky's assertion, Acheson intimated.

Many reporters at the news conference felt that Curzon's classic reply was at least equally applicable to Acheson's own belief, stated yesterday, that the Republican congressional victories would not affect the course of foreign policy or render administrative legislation proposals more difficult of acceptance.

For it seemed that both numerically and psychologically that group, particularly in the Senate, which had been most in opposition

Korea Situation, Democratic Split Are Among Other Reasons Given

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

BALTIMORE, Nov. 8. Republican Theodore R. McKeldin has won the Maryland Governorship by the biggest majority ever piled up in that race—and by tonight both Republicans and Democrats had figured out why.

Backers of defeated Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., had one solid reason—a national GOP trend. But they backed it up with another equally strong reason—Governor Lane sponsored the despised Maryland sales tax. Nationwise, it has always been difficult for a Governor in such a position to achieve reelection.

Actually, both sides concede that both Lane and Senator Millard Tydings were defeated by a combination of four circumstances.

For Tydings, it was:

1. Retribution for State-wide resentment over alleged Administration fumbling in the Korean crisis, with which Tydings was associated as chairman of the Armed Services Committee.

2. The reiterated charges that Tydings, as chairman of the Senate committee investigating Senator McCarthy's charges of communism, had launched a "whitewash".

3. Tydings' loss of personal appeal to Maryland voters, despite his 24-year office tenure, and little irritations that built into big ones when election time came.

4. As Tydings himself put it: "When the Governor went down, it was hard for other Democratic candidates in the State to hold up."

For Lane, there was added irony in his defeat because the previous record for a gubernatorial majority, 66,000, was achieved by a Maryland Democrat, Albert C. Ritchie, over Republican opposition.

In addition to the sales tax and the Republican trend, these other factors were assigned to Lane's defeat:

1. The two-year campaign against Lane, waged by a member of his own party, George P. Mahoney. It created factional tensions never resolved, even though the breach was outwardly healed before the election.

2. Lane made a bad political miscalculation when he trusted State Democratic leaders to keep the rank and file of voters in line. He failed to get a popular majority in the party primary over Mahoney but won on the basis of electoral votes.

On the credit side for the inriding Republicans were (1) the Election Gives Republicans 22 Out of 32 Governorships

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Tuesday's election hit the Democratic party in a particularly sore spot, when it delivered into the Republican column the governorships of 22 out of 32 States where executives were chosen.

Because the governors control State patronage, and are closer to the average voter, the party holding the bulk of the State houses is conceded an advantage in future elections.

Tuesday's balloting put Republicans into State houses in 26 of the 48 State capitals. Before Tuesday, the count was Democrats 29; Republicans 19.

This year the Governors of 33 States were up for election. One State, Maine, elected its customary Republican Governor last September 11. The remainder were chosen Tuesday.

Of the 32, 17 were Democrats; 15 Republicans. Tuesday the GOP elected the following in States that at present have Democratic chief executives:

Arizona, Howard Pyle; Colorado, Dan Thornton; Connecticut, John Davis Lodge; Maryland, Theodore R. McKeldin.

Michigan, Harry F. Kelly; Nevada, Charles Russell; New Mexico, Edwin L. Mechem.

Besides these, the Republicans held on to all 15 States already in the GOP column, by electing:

California, Earl Warren; Idaho, Ben B. Jordan; Iowa, William S. Beardsley; Kansas, Edward F. Arn; Minnesota, Luther W. Youngdahl; Nebraska, Val Peterson; New Hampshire, Sherman Adams; New York, Thomas E. Dewey.

North Dakota, Norman Brunsdale; Oregon, Douglas McKay; Pennsylvania, John S. Fine; South Dakota, Sigurd Anderson.

Prince Georges Political Heads Facing Ax

By James B. Graham
Post Reporter

Official heads will roll after the new Republican administration takes over in Prince Georges County on December 5, following Tuesday's defeat of the Democrats.

This was promised yesterday by John F. Lillard, jr., successful candidate for the House of Delegates and major figure in the pre-election campaign.

One announced target is Police Superintendent Ralph W. Brown, who was singled out by William R. Hughes, a victorious running-mate of Lillard, in the campaign which preceded the GOP landslide on Tuesday.

Brown's is the only one of a number of appointive jobs which has been specifically named as fair game for the new administration's sharpshooters.

Republican leaders, although elated over the results, privately expected no such complete defeat of incumbent Democratic officials.

Their highest hopes were to elect a token few, but their real objective was to poll a heavy vote and then build for an all-out attack in 1954.

GOP's Gains Held Threat To Policies Of President

Senate Count, 49-47, Aids Coalition Power; Republican House Strength Boosted

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A Republican upsurge, centering mainly in the Midwest Cornbelt, yesterday left the Democrats with only razor-edge majorities in Congress.

The crusading measures of the Truman Fair Deal were virtually road-blocked by the vote.

What the effect would be on the Administration's Far Eastern and other foreign policies was still open to doubt.

Late returns on Tuesday's election gave Republicans a net gain of five seats in the Senate, leaving the Democratic margin there a bare 49 to 47. Democrats now hold control, 54 to 42.

Still-incomplete House returns promised Republicans a net gain of up to 31 seats in that chamber, reducing Democrats to a paper-thin working margin.

Coalition Could Control

If Republicans net the top figure, the House division will be: Democrats 234, Republicans 200, Independent one. Thus, both House and Senate will be more vulnerable than ever to a Republican-Southern Democratic coalition.

With 218 needed for a majority, the present House division is: Democrats 261, Republicans 169, Democratic-Liberal one, American Labor one and six vacancies.

Even with that comfortable margin, the Administration has been repeatedly upset on key Fair Deal measures.

From strong House and Senate gains, almost foursquare with what GOP National Chairman Guy Gabrielson had claimed, Republicans went on to capture pivotal governorship races and project key Republican names into the 1952 Presidential sweepstakes.

Taft May Face Draft

Senator Robert A. Taft, despite his recently expressed reluctance to run, may face a draft from conservatives who want a man "who can stand up against labor."

Reelection of Govs. Earl Warren of California and Thomas Dewey in New York will bring the GOP's losing 1948 combination back into the picture. Election of Pennsylvania's Gov. James Duff to the Senate added a fourth possible contender, while Harold Stassen's campaign tangle with President Truman revived interest in a fifth.

A deep gloom, meanwhile, descended on the Senate's Administration contingent, now facing the problem of reorganizing a two-vote margin Senate with a completely new leadership.

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas, defeated by former Republican Representative Everett M. Dirksen in Illinois, and Senate Majority Whip Francis Myers, ousted by Governor Duff in SACRAMENTO, Nov. 8 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren's youngest daughter, Nina, stricken with infantile paralysis, was a little better today, and a doctor said there is hope the crisis has passed.

Special serum—aimed at arresting the disease that has paralyzed both her legs—was administered.

Dr. Junius Harris said the temperature of 17-year-old "Honey Bear" is normal. It was up to 102 yesterday. She has no more headache or backache and the paralysis has not spread. She took some nourishment — gruel and fruit juice.

"We can't be too optimistic, however," he added, "because we know what we are dealing with. It is a dangerous disease and can change suddenly."

President Truman, aboard his yacht in Chesapeake Bay, was shocked to learn of Nina's illness.

"This is terrible. I'm so sorry," he was quoted as saying.

Court Upholds D. C. Milk Rules, Refuses Wakefield Dairy Plea

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Washington's milk regulations are not "obviously unreasonable," District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff ruled yesterday in refusing to enjoin their enforcement.

He decided against the Wakefield-Model Farms Dairy and two groups of its suppliers—Dairy Dale, Inc., Meyersdale, Pa., and Queen City Cooperative Dairy Co., Cumberland, Md., representing a total of 190 farms—who described the rules as "arbitrary and unreasonable."

At the request of John F. Hillyard, attorney for the dairy, Judge Holtzoff granted Wakefield until Wednesday to file an appeal. Meanwhile, he decreed, it may continue importing "outside" milk for sale in the city.

If the appeal is not filed, Wakefield will be required to limit its sales in the District to milk purchased from farms inspected by the city Health Department, although it may continue bringing in State-inspected or United States Public Health Service Grade-A milk for sale outside the city borders.

Two other dairies which do not purchase their supply from the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association—Embassy and Highland Farms—are already operating on this basis. The association, a producer cooperative, supplies about 85 percent of the area milk from farms inspected by the District.

The Holtzoff ruling came at the end of a day of arguments, in which Wakefield laid down a broadside attack on the District

Taft Sees 'Socialism' Rejected by Voters

CINCINNATI, Nov. 8 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said today that the people of Ohio "have rejected President Truman's program for imposing a socialistic, planned economy on the American people and expressed their lack of confidence in the foreign policy and State Department."

In a formal statement after his reelection over Joseph T. Ferguson, Democrat, Taft, who has been in the Senate for 12 years, said:

"I am deeply grateful to the people of Ohio for the record-breaking majority of 425,000 which they gave me in the election yesterday.

"It is particularly significant that I carried 84 out of 88 counties, including all of the eight largest urban counties of Ohio.

"Cleveland, Youngstown and Dayton, hotbeds of labor-union political activity, even surpassed our own estimates.

"This is the first time since 1932 that the Republicans have carried the industrial district.

Hits at Labor Union "Bosses"

"It proves beyond question that the labor union bosses do not control the votes of their own members and that a campaign based only upon a labor-union appeal invites opposition and defeat.

"The people of Ohio have declared their belief in progress in industry, agriculture, health and welfare under a system based on continued liberty of the individual and liberty of the local community . . ."

Earlier today Taft demanded a thorough airing of United States commitments to defend western Europe.

He said one of the questions to be answered is whether western Europe "can really be defended" against Russian atomic attacks that might destroy ports and cut off American armies from their supplies.

Indicating a battle over this issue is in prospect when Congress returns to Washington, Taft accused the Truman administration of making military commitments "without the slightest public discussion or consideration."

"The Administration has pursued a policy of secrecy and undertaken to deal with these (foreign) issues without giving the people any chance to decide what they really want," the Republican Senator said in a weekly report to Ohioans. The report was prepared prior to yesterday's election.

Taft posed these six questions he said ought to be answered to the satisfaction of the American people before any further commitments are made for defending western Europe:

1. "How many American soldiers will be required and what will be the additional cost?"
2. "How much will it increase the necessity of drafting every American boy as he becomes 18 years of age, for two years' service in the Army?"
3. "Can Western Europe really be defended?"
4. "If the Russians have atomic bombs with which they can bomb the cities of this country—according to military authorities—can they also bomb the debarkation ports in Europe and cut off our armies in Europe from American supplies?"
5. "What will a third World War look like?"
6. "How do we finally win it?"

Labor Admits Vote Results Hurt Its Aims

By The Associated Press

Organized labor's political forces, which poured more money and energy into Tuesday's election campaigns than in any off-year race in history, gloomily acknowledged crushing setbacks yesterday.

Many union leaders declined to comment publicly. But in both AFL and CIO camps there was a ready admission that victories by Senators Taft (R., Ohio) and Millikin (R., Colo.), plus defeats of such Senate Democrats as Lucas of Illinois, Thomas of Utah and Myers of Pennsylvania would hurt organized labor's aims generally.

Thomas has been chairman of the Senate Labor Committee and one of labor's most sympathetic members.

The big blow was Taft's one-sided victory over Joseph T. Ferguson in Ohio, where labor groups were concentrated as never before to send "Mr. Republican" down to defeat. But yesterday, at least, there was no inclination to alibi.

No Reason in Change

"We did the best job we knew how," said Jack Kroll, director of the CIO's Political Action Committee. "I can see no reason to change our ogranizational of other plans."

AFL President William Green, who, like Kroll, votes in Ohio, said:

"I was greatly surprised and very much disappointed over the outcome. However, it's democracy in action. We'll simply have to prepare for the future and carry on the fight to repeal the Taft-Hartley Law."

Taft's authorship of the current labor act was the big reason for making him the No. 1 target of the unions' "purge" action.

But the No. 2 target in some labor circles—principally railroad unions—was Senator Donnell (R., Mo.), and he fell victim to the campaign of union-supported Thomas C. Hennings, jr., a Democrat.

There were other indications that even though the labor combine had failed to achieve the results it wanted in key contests in Ohio, Pennsylvania, California, Colorado, Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois, union-indorsed candidates for House and Senate generally broke about even.

Unions fared worst in the governor fights. Labor groups backed candidates in 20 States. Eighten of those candidates lost. Only two—in Rhode Island and Masachusetts—were elected.

In the Senate, a total of 31 aspirants were indorsed by some labor organization in 28 States. Seventeen were victorious. Fourteen bowed to the opposition.

The 14 who went down were Lucas, Thomas, Myers, Ferguson, Helen Gahagan Douglas in California, John A. Carroll in Colorado, Claude J. Burtenshaw and D. Worth Clark in Idaho, Alex M. Campbell in Indiana, Albert J. Loveland in Iowa, Paul Aiken in Kansas, Emmet J. Kelley in New Hampshire, Harry O'Brien in North Dakota and Thmoas E. Fairchild in Wisconsin.

In the House, labor groups supported 333 candidates—and apparently broke about even in the outcome.

Montgomery County, traditionally Democratic, revolted against the party for the second time in four years and swept Republicans into almost every county office.

The coalition of Republicans and the Charter Committee in the County Council fight also appeared to have affected the other contests. For instance, Montgomery County will have its first Republican sheriff since 1864 in Charles S. Lawrenson, who defeated former County Commissioner Charles H. Jamison, his Democratic opponent, 20,284 to 19,322.

In the State's attorney race, Walter W. Dawson, the incumbent, who also is chairman of the Republican State Central Committee for the county, with 20,597 votes, defeated Trial Magistrate Alger Y. Barbee, Democrat, who polled 19,534.

Hyde Wins By 2000

DeWitt S. Hyde, a member of the present all Republican delegation to Annapolis, was elected State Senator, defeating former State's Attorney Joseph B. Simpson, jr., 21,368 to 19,395.

Chief interest was centered in the County Council race, where all elected were indorsed by the Charter Committee, five being Republicans and two Democrats.

Mrs. Stella B. Werner, formerly executive secretary of the Charter Committee, running on the Democratic Victory Committee slate, nosed out her Republican opponent, John C. Reid, also indorsed by the Charter Committee, 20,763 to 20,046. The other Democrat elected was Grover Walker, who was unopposed and also had Charter indorsement. Walker received 23,681 votes, the largest vote received by any candidate.

Harold F. Hammond, only incumbent to run for reelection, received the most votes of any candidate who had opposition. He polled 23,057 against his Democratic opponent, Robert T. Snure, who received 18,180 votes.

Others Elected to Council

Other Republicans elected to the council were: Lathrop E. Smith, 23,318; Mrs. Kathryn J. Lawlor, 23,029; George F. Nesbitt, 22,906; and J. Louis Monarch, 21,575.

Those elected to the House were Julian P. King, 22,149; Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., 22,313, and Mrs. Leona M. Rush, 22,008, all of whom are incumbents; J. Paull Marshall, 22,088; Robert A. Wallace, 22,264, and J. Douglas Bradshaw, 22,147, who is a member of the present council.

The incumbent judges of the Orphans Court, all Republicans, were reelected.

Walter C. Clarke, Republican incumbent, was reelected register of wills, with 20,370 votes.

Watkins and Maddox Win

Clayton K. Watkins, veteran clerk of the Circuit Court, and a Democrat, with 20,441 votes, defeated his Republican opponent, James B. Parkhill, who received 19,309 votes. Robert K. Maddox, Democrat, defeated Thomas B. McNeill, Republican, for surveyor, 20,223 to 19,738.

Theodore R. McKeldin, Governor-elect, polled 24,815 votes to 20,292 cast for Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., and Republican John Marshall Butler, elected Senator, won 24,493 votes while his Democratic opponent, Millard Tydings, received 20,086. Representative J. Glenn Beall, Republican incumbent, polled 24,231 votes against his Democratic opponent, Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle, 17,187.

School Plans Hurt

Causes Listed In Arlington Bond Defeat

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

Arlington residents scratched their heads yesterday and tried to explain why a $7,450,000 school bond issue—generally favored to win at the polls—was nosed out Tuesday by 380 votes.

From the welter of theories current yesterday, these three principal explanations emerged:

1. The 7830-to-7450 bond issue tally spells a vote of "no confidence" in the present Arlington School Board.

2. The reason lies in "the growing tax-consciousness" of Arlington residents.

3. Possible voter confusion over the wording of the school bond issue as presented on voting machines.

In the election, voters who rejected the school bond issue overwhelmingly favored a $2,617,000 bond for improving sewage treatment facilities. The vote was 11,372 to 3790.

The election also gave County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan a healthy 9931 to 5497 margin over his nearest opponent, Fred Bach, the Democratic candidate.

Some school bond supporters yesterday agreed with Arlington Treasurer John Locke Green when he said the adverse vote means residents "have lost confidence in the school board."

Of Arlington's 27 precincts, 19 opposed the school bond, 8 favored it. Of the 8, Arlington, Arlington Forest, Fairlington, and Fillmore Precincts—each with large apartment projects—turned in large probond majorities.

But of the opposing 19, at least 5 apartment-heavy precincts—Barcroft, Columbia, Lyon Park, Lyon Village, and Park Lane—rejected the bonds.

The second theary was advanced by Mrs. Edmund Campbell, school board chairman, who said the adverage bond vote reflected "the tax consciousness" of many Arlington citizens amounting to "a kind of fear."

The third explanation, advanced by several citizens who phoned The Washington Post, lies in different wording of the school and sewage bond issue proposals.

The school bond proposition asks whether Arlington shall "contract a debt, borrow money, and issue its bonds" to improve schools. The sewage proposal asks simply: "Shall the County Board . . . issue bonds . . . to improve sewage treatment facilities," without mention of debt or borrowing.

School officials pointed out that wording of the school bond referendum was approved by the school board.

Fairfax Committee Scheduled To Map New Government

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

The Fairfax County Supervisors agreed unanimously yesterday to name a seven-member committee to study means of putting into effect the new county executive government dictated by the electorate on Tuesday.

Decision to appoint the committee was made on the recommendation of David Lawrence, former vice chairman of a 21-member government study commission which originally advocated adoption of the county executive form of government.

Pointing to the complications likely to be encountered in an abrupt changeover from the existing executive secretary administration, Lawrence called for appointment of a committee "thoroughly familiar" with county government. Furthermore, he suggested it include some members who opposed the county executive form of government in the late campaign.

Lawrence specifically recommended appointment of Omer Hirst, chairman of the county's Good Government League, and Guy Bayes, president of the Federation of Fairfax County Citizens Associations. Both groups campaigned vigorously for the county manager form of government, defeated by the county executive plan, 5210 votes to 3502.

Supervisor Arthur Shaffer suggested the committee include one or more representatives of those who opposed any change in government. The other board members concurred.

Supporters of both county executive and county manager forms agreed yesterday that a late-developing campaign for retention of the present government actually was a major factor in the victory for the executive form.

Some forces, it was pointed out, called first for a vote in favor of the present government and on the second question, for a vote for the executive form. As a result, the executive plan drew the support not only of its original advocates, but of a majority of those whose first preference was for no change.

Meanwhile, the disappointment of county manager supporters was tempered by their satisfaction that there will be a change. They termed defeat of the present government a "progressive step in the right direction."

They pledged complete support to the new government. Hirst said the committee for good government would continue to work in the interest of better government for the county and would work in close cooperation with county officials to install the new administration on an efficient basis.

The League of Women Voters, which worked vigorously for the county manager form, also announced its full support of the victorious executive faction, as did the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Although the new government will not become effective until January 1, 1952, the transition from the present administration looms as a complicated process.

The executive form provides no change in the method of electing supervisors, who will be chosen from each of the six magisterial districts by voters in their respective districts only. The new supervisors will be selected in November, 1951.

Among major changes is abolition of the elective offices of commissioner of revenue and treasurer. They will be succeeded overnight by a department of finance, whose director and other personnel will be named by the new supervisors.

The supervisors also will have authority to appoint the heads of the welfare, health and police departments and all members of the county school board.

On Capitol Hill

Election Fails To Alter D. C. Committees

Tuesday election results failed to affect the membership of the Senate and House District Committees.

Three vacancies will open up in the Senate committee as the result of the retirement of Senators Leahy (D., R. I.) and Darby (R., Kans.) and the defeat of Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) in the primary election last summer.

On the House side, there will be one District Committee vacancy, since Representative Wadsworth (R., N. Y.) did not seek reelection.

The two Senate committee members up for reelection, Senators Johnston (D., S. C.) and Dworshak (R., Idaho) both won, while the 24 House committeemen seeking another two-year term also will return in the Eighty-Second Congress.

Of interest to District residents was the election of Everett M. Dirksen, Illinois Republican, as a Senator after long service in the House.

Having been directly associated with District legislation since 1934, he would be a logical choice on the Senate committee, some local observers say. He served continuously on the House committee, and as its chairman during the Eightieth Congress.

Dirksen, who declares the home rule bill for the District "should have passed" before this, last night ducked the question of whether he would seek a place on the Senate local affairs committee.

3500 in Chile End Strike

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—A strike of 3500 workers in the Nebraska nitrate fields near Iquique ended today

Nearby Vote in Va. No Help To Victorious Rep. Smith

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) yesterday owed his reelection to another term in the United States House of Representatives to the rural vote in the Eighth Congressional District.

As the Virginia election tabulation wound up, it showed that while Smith was an easy winner on the basis of returns from the whole district, he would have lost his chance if he had to depend on Virginians near Washington for his votes.

In the 67 precincts of Alexandria and Falls Church and Arlington and Fairfax Counties, Smith polled 15,444 votes to 15,904 for his opponent Tyrrell Krum, Fairfax County Republican.

In the downstate sectors, however, Smith picked up enough strength over Krum and Social-Democrat Clarke T. Robb to register a district total of 29,103 votes against 20,875 for Krum and 992 for Robb. This was on the basis of unofficial returns from 222 of the district's 241 precincts.

Four other Democratic incumbents in Congress from Virginia had no trouble getting reelected. The remaining four in the all-Democratic delegation were unopposed.

School bond issues fared badly at the hands of Virginia voters throughout the State. Only one proposal for school construction won the electorate's approval, while four were rejected. Two bond issues for other purposes were approved.

Adjacent Fairfax and Loudoun Counties voted in opposite directions on proposals for government change. Fairfax County approved a transition to county executive type government, while Loudoun residents turned down a proposal to change to that form of government.

Two amendments to the Virginia constitution also apparently were adopted. An amendment to permit more judges in cities over a certain size (now applicable only to Richmond) drew 73,845 votes for and 34,844 against on the basis of incomplete returns.

An amendment to permit merger of school systems where needed received 67,848 votes for to 41,862 against.

The total official Virginia vote was expected to be far below record totals. Generally considered a "quiet" election, Virginians numbering about 150,000 went to the polls on Tuesday. A record vote of some 418,000 was cast in the 1948 presidential election.

Allies Must Aid Arms Drive, Robertson Says

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Nov. 8 (AP).—Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) said here tonight it is apparent now "that we must back up our economic aid to Europe with more direct defense measures in an arms program that may cost as much as 30 billion dollars a year for an indefinite period."

In an address prepared for delivery to members of the Charlottesville Chamber of Commerce, Virginia's junior Senator said that in doing this, "we must have the full cooperation of our allies, because if the United States breaks its financial back in an effort to carry the load, the economic structure of the entire world will crumble."

"In short," he added, "we face today a crisis which is more acute than many of our people realized in 1948, when they thought we could disband our Army and Navy and go about business as usual, worrying only about inflation or other economic problems."

Voters in Four States Reject Proposals To Legalize Various Forms of Gambling

By The Associated Press

Voters in four States turned down proposals to legalize gambling in a variety of forms in Tuesday's election.

The gambling propositions were among 164 constitutional amendments, referendums, and initiatives on the ballots in 34 States.

Californians swamped a proposal to legalize gambling under State control. Sponsors had estimated the State would get at least 300 million dollars a year in gambling tax revenue earmarked for welfare costs.

Massachusetts apparently defeated a lottery plan sponsored by a society for old-age pensions. At the same time, however, Bay State voters were giving a favorable margin to a proposal to establish a minimum old-age-assistance payment of $75 a month. The State lottery had been designed to finance the hiked checks to oldsters.

Montana was voting strongly against a proposal to legalize slot machines.

A plan to legalize gambling under State control was rejected in Arizona. The voters in the same State also turned down proposals for local option on prohibition of liquor sales, for increased aid to the aged and for antisegregation measures in schools.

Three States Voted on Bonus

Three States—Montana, Oregon and West Virgiina—were on the way to approving a bonus for veterans of World War II.

A number of propositions on liquor sales were voted on, with prohibition advocates faring poorly.

South Dakota was turning down a proposal to prohibit the serving of liquor and food in the same room. Oregon decisively rejected a measure to ban the sale of advertised liquor.

South Carolinians voted to eliminate the poll tax as a requirement for voting eligibility. If the General Assembly ratifies this next year, only six States—Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia—will retain the tax as a voting requirement.

Georgia appeared to be voting down a proposal to extend to general elections its county unit system of voting, now used only in primaries.

Idaho, R. I. Favor Indians

Indians fared well in two widely separated States. Rhode Island approved a proposal to extend voting privileges to Narragansett Indians. Idaho voted strongly for a proposed amendment to grant full citizenship to redmen.

Washington State decided to tighten its old-age-assistance program rather than liberalize it. A proposal to increase pensions from $60 to $65 a month was beaten. This would have hiked the State's welfare costs to an estimated 250-million-dollar biennium from the present 223 million. At the same time, the voters were approving a plan of Gov. Arthur B. Langlie to curtail the welfare program and cut the total cost to 175 million for a two-year period.

In Oklahoma, a proposal to indorse world federation was trailing by more than four to one.

Missouri voters approved a constitutional amendment making it easier for school districts to vote emergency tax increases.

In Michigan, three proposals appeared to have won approval. They would authorize sale of colored oleomargarine, define "subversion" as a crime against the State, and authorize a 65-million-dollar bond issue for mental and tuberculosis hospitals.

Arkansas Defeats Prohibition

In Arkansas the voters turned in a big margin against proposed State-wide prohibition on manufacture, sale or transportation of liquor, and possession of more than a quart of liquor.

Utah voted a pay raise t members of its Legislature. The lawmakers' salaries will go up from $300 a year to $500. They also will get a new $5-a-day expense allowance while in session.

Utah's voters also approved a constitutional amendment placing general control of the State's public school system under an elected State board of education and making the State superintendent of public instruction an appointive instead of elective official.

8 Women Win Congress Seats, 6 in GOP; 18 Were Candidates

Only 8 of 18 women candidates for Congress won election or re-election Tuesday, and six of the successful office-seekers were Republicans.

The only other woman candidate for high office—Mrs. Ana Frohmiller, a Democrat seeking the Arizona governorship—was trailing Republican Howard Pyle by about 500 votes with some precincts still unreported.

Helen Gahagan Douglas, former California Representative and a Fair Deal Democrat, suffered one of the most stinging defeats as the lone woman candidate for a Senate seat. She was soundly trounced by former Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), who was instrumental in bringing the Alger Hiss Communist perjury case to trial.

The eight women chosen as Representatives in the Eighty-second Congress compare with the present nine. The only woman Senator in the Eighty-first, Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), still has four years to serve.

The two winning Democratic candidates for the House were incumbents who were reelected—Representatives Edna F. Kelly (also the Liberal Party choice) of New York and Reva Beck Bosone of Utah. Mrs. Bosone participated in the sole all-feminine congressional fight, beating her Republican challenger, Mrs. Ivy Baker Priest.

Four Republican Congresswomen also were reelected, they are Representatives Cecil M. Harden (Ind.), Edith Nourse Rogers (Mass.), Katherine St. George (N. Y.) and Frances P. Bolton (Ohio).

The other two successful GOP candidates are Mrs. Marguerite Stitt Church of Illinois, who won the House seat left vacant when her husband, Ralph E. Church, died, and Miss Ruth Thompson of Michigan.

The other Republican loser, besides Mrs. Priest, is Mrs. F. F. (Mildred) Powell, who lost to a Democratic incumbent in Washington.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

RUTH THOMPSON, Republican, will be the first woman to represent Michigan in the House of Representatives. She won over her Democratic opponent, Noel P. Fox, in a close race. She replaces retiring Representative Albert Engel, a Republican

Among the losing Democrats was Representative Chase Going Woodhouse (Conn.), who was defeated by Republican Horace Seely-Brown. Other Democrats who were beaten include Mrs. Ester Murray of California, Mrs. Gracie Pfost of Idaho, Mrs. Anna Sullivan of Massachusetts, Mrs. Marcella F. Killen of Minnesota and Mrs. Mildred McGill and Miss Mary Louise Nice of New York.

Britons See Danger to Aid In U. S. Voting

LONDON, Nov. 8 (U.P.)—Western Europe today interpreted the results of the American election as a serious setback to President Truman and a blow to his foreign-aid programs.

Always concerned about the uncertainties of American politics, western Europeans immediately began worrying that the close division in the new Congress might hamstring American foreign policy.

And Europe is in a position to react to such a photo-finish election. Almost every government in western Europe is plagued by a paper rather than a working majority in Parliament.

Lord Beaverbrook's London Evening Standard described the results as a "serious setback" for President Truman. And the Liberal afternoon London Star said President Truman's Fair Deal policy at home and "his aid program abroad have received a severe check."

Le Monde of Paris worried lest the President be forced to remove Secretary of State Dean Acheson from his Cabinet.

Immediate worries were about the Marshall aid and military-aid program. The Republicans, especially Senator Robert A. Taft, are associated here with smaller appropriations for foreign aid.

But British officials especially wondered what will now happen on American policy in the Far East. Europeans generally have feared at times that American policy might be too bellicose. And they are aware that Republicans generally have wanted a tougher policy with respect to the Chinese Communists.

Major concern here was the immediate Republican demand for Acheson's scalp because of the policy pursued in the Far East. Europe generally was greatly pleased with the last shakeup in the Truman Cabinet when Gen. George C. Marshall took over the defense post from Louis Johnson.

Truman Called Cheerful After Vote Setback

ABOARD THE YACHT MY MARY GAIL, on the Potomac, Nov. 8 (U.P.)—President Truman was described by aides today as being "very cheerful" despite sharp Democratic reverses in Tuesday's general elections.

Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said the Chief Executive was disappointed, however, by the defeat of several key Senate lieutenants, including Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas.

He said the President and his staff took comfort in the fact that the Democrats will retain control of the Senate by a two-vote margin and will have a "comfortable majority" in the House.

The President is taking a short vacation cruise on Chesapeake Bay aboard the presidential yacht Williamsburg before returning to Washington and a series of inevitable clashes with Congress where Republicans and Southern Democrats will be able to dictate legislation.

Reporters, who trailed the Presidential party aboard the My Mary Gail, were told by Ross over the radio-telephone that the Williamsburg cruise was off Annapolis Thursday and then return to the Patuxent Naval Air Station Thursday night.

Ross said the President naturally was disappointed at the defeat of Lucas, Democratic Senate whip Francis P. Myers of Pennsylvania and Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Mr. Truman was up at dawn to check the election returns sent to the Williamsburg from the Pentagon by radio-telephone.

Election Results Summarized by States

By The Associated Press

Here are the election results in all States (all States had House races; many also elected Senators and Governors):

Alabama: Democrats won as usual. Gordon Persons is the new Governor. Lister Hill returns to Senate. The nine House seats stay Democratic.

Arizona: Howard Pyle (R.) was leading Mrs. Ana Frohmiller (D.) in an exceedingly close race for Governor. Carl Hayden (D.) reelected Senator. Democrats won the two House seats as before.

Arkansas: Senator J. William Fulbright and the seven House members were reelected, and so was Gov. Sidney S. McMath. All of them are Democrats.

California: Earl Warren (R.) kept the Governorship by beating James Roosevelt. Richard M. Nixon (R.) outran Helen Gahagan Douglas in the Senate race. Republicans won 13 House seats and Democrats nine, with one contest undecided. Old lineup: Republicans 12, Democrats 11.

Colorado: Dan Thornton (R.) pushed Walter W. Johnson (D) out of the Governorship. Eugene D. Millikin (R.) was reelected Senator. The four House seats went two to each party, ending the Democrats' 3-1 margin.

Connecticut: John Davis Lodge (R.) ended the Governorship of Chester Bowles (D.). But Senators Brien McMahon and William Benton, Democrats, were both reelected. Republicans captured four of the six House seats, breaking the old 3-3 split.

Delaware: J. Caleb Boggs (R.) was reelected to Delaware's only House seat.

Florida: A new Democratic Senator, George A. Smathers. (He beat Senator Claude Pepper in the Democratic primary May). Democrats took the six House seats as usual.

Georgia: Democrats reelected Gov. Herman E. Talmadge and Senator Walter F. George. The 10 House seats went Democratic as expected.

Idaho: Both Senate seats went Republican. Senator Henry C. Dworshak was reelected to one seat, and Herman Welker won the other in a race against former Senator D. Worth Clark. Another Republican, Len B. Jordan, was elected Governor. Republicans bagged the two House seats too, ending a 1-1 division.

Illinois—Everett M. Dirksen gave the Republicans one of their biggest victories when he knocked Scott W. Lucas out of the Senate. The House seats fell 18 to Republicans and 8 to Democrats (a GOP gain of four seats).

Indiana—Republicans sent Homer E. Capehart back to the Senate and gained five new House seats. This gave them 9-2 domination of Indiana's delegation in the House.

Iowa—Republicans all the way. Bourke B. Hickenlooper returns to Senate and William S. Beardsley to governorship. The eight House seats continue in GOP column.

Kansas—Republicans elected Frank Carlson to Senate and Edward F. Arn to Governor's post, and kept all six House seats, too.

Kentucky: Democrats sent Earle C. Clements to Senate and again captured seven House seats to Republicans' two.

Louisiana: Democrats reelected Russell B. Long to Senate and collected all eight House seats as usual.

Maine: This State had its election September 11. Frederick G. Payne (R.) was reelected Governor, and Republicans were reelected to all three House seats.

Maryland: John Marshall Butler (R.) wrecked the bid of Millard E. Tydings (D.) for reelection to Senate. Theodore R. McKeldin (R.) turned William Preston Lane, jr. (D.) out of the Governor's chair. The six House seats were divided 3-3; this was a GOP gain of one seat.

Massachusetts: The Democrat Governor, Paul A. Dever, won reelection. Republicans again won eight House Seats to Democrats' six.

Michigan: Harry F. Kelly (R.) deposed Gov. G. Mennen Williams (D.) in a close contest. House division same as before: Republicans 12, Democrats 5.

Minnesota: Luther W. Youngdahl (R.) reelected Governor. House lineup same as before: Relicans 5; Democrats 4.

Mississippi: The seven House seats went Democratic, as always.

Missouri: A Democrat, Thomas C. Hennings, jr., knocked Republican Forrest C. Donnell out of the Senate. Democrats won nine House seats and Republicans two, with two races uncertain. Old lineup: Democrats 12, Republicans 1.

Montana: This State's two-House members, one a Republican and the other a Democrat, were both reelected.

Nebraska: Republican Val Peterson won reelection. Republicans took all four House seats instead of only three as before.

McCarran Reelected

Nevada: Pat McCarran (D.) reelected to Senate. The Democrat Gov. Vail Pittman, seeking reelection, was beaten by Charles Russell (R.). The Democrat holder of Nevada's only House seat was returned to office.

New Hampshire: Senator Charles W. Tobey, Governor Sherman Adams and the State's two House members were all reelected. They are all Republicans.

New Jersey: House lineup stays the same: Nine Republicans, five Democrats.

New Mexico: A Republican, Edwin L. Mechem, won the governorship. Democrats held onto the State's two House seats.

New York: Thomas E. Dewey (R.), reelected Governor. Herbert H. Lehman (D.), kept his Senate seat by beating Joe R. Hanley. New House lineup is: Republicans 23, Democrats 22 (old lineup: Democrats 24, Republicans 20, American Labor Party 1).

North Carolina: Democrats sent Clyde R. Hoey back to Senate and put Willis Smith in the other Senate seat. They also reaped the 12 House seats as usual.

North Dakota: A Republican sweep. C. Norman Brunsdale becomes Governor, Milton R. Young returns to Senate, and the two House seats are still G.O.P.

GOP Gains 4 Seats in Ohio

Ohio: Robert A. Taft (R.) breezed back to Senate, and Republicans made a gain of four House seats. New House lineup: 15 Republicans, seven Democrats, one Independent. Frank J. Lausche (D.) was reelected Governor.

Oklahoma: Democratic Congressman A. S. Mike Monroney won a Senate seat. But Democrats lost their complete control of the eight House seats, and the new lineup is: Democrats 6, Republicans 2. Johnston Murray (D.) won the governorship.

Oregon: Clean sweep for GOP, with Wayne Morse returning to Senate, Republicans keeping all four House seats, and Douglas McKay holding onto his Governor's chair.

Pennsylvania: James H. Duff (R.) took Senate seat away from Senator Francis J. Myers (D). Another Republican, John S. Fine, was named Governor. Republicans increased their House seats by two, the new lineup being: Republicans 20, Democrats 13.

Rhode Island: A Democratic sweep. John O. Pastore elected Senator. Dennis J. Roberts elected Governor. Democrats reelected to two House seats.

South Carolina: Democrats put James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State, in the Governor's chair and reelected Olin D. Johnston to Senate. They likewise kept all six House seats.

South Dakota: Francis Case (R.) elected Senator. Sigurd Anderson (R.) elected Governor. Republicans retained the two House seats.

Tennessee: Democrats elected eight Representatives and Republicans two, as before. Gordon Browning (D.) reelected Governor.

Texas: the lone Republican Representative was squeezed out, leaving the Democrats in possession of all 21 House seats. Allan Shivers (D.) reelected Governor.

Utah: Wallace F. Bennett (R.) knocked Elbert D. Thomas (D.) out of the Senate. The Democrats, however, hung onto Utah's two House seats.

Vermont: George D. Aiken (R.) reelected Senator. Lee E. Emerson (R.) named Governor. A Republican won the State's only House seat as usual.

Virginia: All nine House seats went Democratic again.

Washington: Warren G. Magnuson (D.) reelected to Senate. House lineup unchanged: Republicans 4; Democrats, 2.

West Virginia: Democrats again won all six House seats.

Wisconsin: Republicans put Walter J. Kohler, jr., in Governor's job and reelected Alexander Wiley to Senate. Besides, they collected nine of the State's 10 House seats (old lineup: Republicans, 8; Democrats, 2).

Wyoming: Republicans elected Frank A. Barrett as Governor and retained the State's only House seat.

NPA Orders Steel Supplies Available To Small Business

The National Production Authority yesterday issued an order aimed at insuring supplies of steel products for small business firms.

It requires steel producers to allot to steel warehouses—which supply small business firms—equitable shares of the steel that producers have left after filling defense orders.

Officials of the Government control agency said the warehouses in turn will be expected to "maintain normal price relationships," although no price ceilings have been set by the Government.

NPA Administrator William H. Harrison said he has discussed the price question with Economic Stabilization Administrator Allan Valentine, who will supervise price controls if and when they are invoked.

The new order, labeled by NPA as a "major step," is effective immediately.

Hyattsville Man Freed by Jury In Auto Death

William H. Shipp, 24, of Sargent rd., Hyattsville, Md., was acquitted yesterday in Municipal Court of negligent homicide in the traffic death of William Halstead, 23, of Glenn Dale, Md.

Halstead was getting into his parked automobile from the left side April 30 in the 3400 block of Eastern ave. ne., when he was struck by Shipp's automobile, according to police.

Halstead denied any negligence. The jury deliberated about an hour before returning the verdict of innocence.

Court Upholds D. C. Milk Law

regulations. The city legal staff countered with a full-scale campaign on the sanitary conditions of the farms and milk of some of Wakefield's suppliers and coplaintiffs.

Only two witnesses were heard. John Russell Young, president of the District Board of Commissioners, testified that he felt the regulations were "reasonable." Dr. Abraham W. Fuchs, chief of the milk and food branch, United States Public Health Service, said several of the 11 regulations cited by Wakefield as "unreasonable" belonged in that category and were not used by any State to his knowledge.

Dairy Cites Five Points

Attorney Hillyard, made these charge in his opening argument for Wakefield:

1. The regulations were drawn to and had the effect of closing the market to the advantage of the Milk Producers Association.

2. Many requirements are not in effect anywhere else in the United States and are tougher than those in Maryland and Virginia.

3. The Commissioners overrode expert testimony and the advice of the District Director of Public Health in establishing a farm rating advantage for steam sterilization over chemical sanitization.

4. The District Health Department did not inspect many farms which filed for permits, although the law requires that inspection be made within 30 days of application. At the same time, at least one permit-holder was permitted to continue operation without complying with one of the new regulations.

5. A member of the city's legal staff, Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward A. Beard, is a member of the Producers Association. Beard and Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch represented the Commissioners at the hearing yesterday.

After this presentation, Judge Hotzoff ruled that the manner in which the Commissioners arrived at their revised regulations last August was not before the court. He defined the area of argument as whether the regulations were "obviously unreasonable."

Price Not Lower

Later he asked the Waflefield attorney if the diary sold its milk at a lower retail price than other local firms. Hillyard replied that it did not because it purchased milk at the same price or higher than the others. The judge said the price here is "very high."

Judge Holtzoff then declared there was no advantage to the public whether the milk was purchased from the association or the "outside." Hillyard replied that the competition of independents restrained the association from boosting its prices.

Asked by the judge whether there had been any consumer price advantage in buying from the independents during the past eight years of the open door on milk, Hillyard replied there had not been.

The District's case hit sharply at whether the enforcement of the city's ban on "outside" milk caused "irrevocable damages," as claimed by Wakefield and its two suppliers.

Fowl and Cows Together

Assistant Corporation Counsel Gasch quoted from depositions taken from officials of the two supplier groups to show that they were not interested in selling to the Washington market if they were forced to eliminate housing of fowl and other animals in the same quarters as cows. This practice is prohibited in District regulations.

Earlier, Dr. Fuchs, a Wakefield witness, had testified such a regulation "is not unreasonable." Gasch said that on this basis neither supplier was losing out by "unreasonable regulations," even under the interpretation of their own witness.

He argued that Wakefield was not suffering damages since a deposition by the firm treasurer, Aubrey Simpson, declared that "considerably more" was being paid now for "outside" milk than that available from the Producer Association.

Assistant Corporation Councel Beard then cited a report by four Health Department veterinarians who inspected 18 farms that have supplied Wakefield and found the "average score was somewhat below 50." A score of 70 is required to obtain a District permit.

Beard countered the two principal complaints of "unreasonable" regulations — requirement of a 250-square foot milk house and a lesser rating for chemical sterilization—with these arguments:

1. The break-even point on a dairy farm is 22 cows and the 250-square-foot minimum is not unreasonable for one this size. Smaller farms probably could not make the grade financially and traditionally have been the source of high bacteria count milk supplies, Beard said.

2. A final policy has not yet been set on chemical sterilization, since it is a new process on D. C.-inspected farms, authorized only in the past few months, and the Commissioners have not had an opportunity to see how it works out. Eventually it may receive equal rating with steam sanitization, Beard declared.

Nation-Wide Phone Strike Scheduled Today

p. m. to get strike instructions. Many left their jobs for as long as three hours to attend the meeting.

Altogether, 17,000 Western Electric employes in 43 States are expected to strike for "substantial" wage increases this morning. Also striking will be 20,000 employes of the Michigan Bell Telephone System. By setting up picket lines around other Bell System installations, the strikers plan to tie up 250,000 more CWA members.

Federal mediators were holding sessions late into the night hoping to avert the walkout at the eleventh hour.

Union leaders here had urged all 7000 CWA members here to attend the "emergency" session, leaving their jobs if necessary. It was not clear, however, how many attending the overflow meeting actually left their posts.

Service Unimpaired

A C. & P. spokesman said 80 percent of employes stayed at work. He asserted that half of the 900 operators on duty during the afternoon remained on the job, and that this force, along with supervisory help, had little difficulty in keeping up with long distance calls. At one central, the management official said, the employes stayed on 100 percent.

There was no trouble at all on the local system, the company spokesman said, because all local phones are dial-operated.

Local union leaders said that whatever work stoppage might have been created was incidental to the emergency meeting. Although the meeting lasted one hour, some tttending had to leave their office buildings an hour before, and got back at hour after the meeting. Those who left their posts to attend the meeting will be docked for the time absent from work, a company spokesman said.

Women outnumbered men 9 to 1 at the meeting. The girls were in a gay, picnic-like mood, and the arena did a thriving hot dogs —coffee—coke business.

Meeting Lasts 35 Minutes

Actual business lasted only 35 minutes, with a strike background speech by Glenn E. Watts, president of CWA Division 36, representing some 3500 craft and commercial employes; and a strike behavior speech — in the event of a strike today—by Mrs. Eleanor Jane Palmer, president of Division 50, representing 2700 operators and traffic employes.

Watts and Mrs. Palmer asserted —and they were cheered—that the 320 Western Electric workers are fighting for higher wages—the goal of the 7,000 union employes in this area.

Union leaders said the Communications Workers made several attempts to obtain a "voluntary" pay raise for the Chesapeake & Potomac workers here, but that the company insisted on holding firm to its contract into next May, without giving a direct "no" to the pay boost request.

"If the Western Electric workers get a substantial increase," Watts said, "then we'll get a substantial wage increase for all the union members here.

Must Honor Picket Line

Mrs. Palmer instructed the rank and filers that they would be expected to honor any picket lines set up by Western Electric strikers, but that the C & P employes were not to join the picket lines. The union members also were explicitly told to go to work as usual should there be no picket line this morning.

The leaders indicated that Western Electric workers would not picket all Bell System buildings in this area, but would limit picket lines to "strategic points." Not until the picket lines are set, will it be known how many of the 7000 union members here will be joining in the walkout. The rank and filers were also warned not to interfere with phone service once they report to work.

J. R. B. Crigler, vice president and general manager of C&P, denounced the meeting as a "walkout" and a "disgraceful example of the irresponsibility of union leaders." He added:

"No labor dispute exists or is pending between this company and the local CWA-CIO unions representing our employes.

"Contracts, mutually agreed to some months ago, are in effect and there is no bargaining in progress at this time.

"By leaving their jobs, these employes, and union officials who incited the walkout, seemed willing to temporarily disrupt telephone service in the Nation's Capital during a time of emergency.

"Their action indicates a shareful disregard for the public's welfare and safety."

GOP Gains Imperil Truman's Policies

Pennsylvania, will return for the "Lame Duck" session starting November 27.

O'Mahoney Talked for Leader

But in the new Senate convening next January, the Democrats must find men who can bridge the party's big North-South chasm to replace both.

Three names figured prominently in the Senate leadership speculation. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), who said in Cheyenne yesterday he was "not a candidate," and Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.), outspoken foe of the Administration's Brannan plan, were being mentioned for majority leader. However, the Associated Press quoted Anderson as saying in Albuquerque that he would not accept the position.

There was some talk of Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), leader of the Senate's Southern bloc, but some colleagues voiced doubt that the South would enter a candidate.

For Majority Whip, replacing Myers, most speculation centered on Senator Ernest W. McFarland (D., Ariz.), who sometimes batted for Lucas in the leadership post.

So shaky was the new Senate Democratic majority, smallest since 1932, that the death of a single Senate Democratic elder statesman, and appointment of a Republican in his stead, would tie the Senate, 48 to 48.

GOP Gains 6, Loses 1

To challenge Democratic control, Republicans picked up Senate seats in Maryland, California, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Idaho and Utah, for a gain of six seats. Democratic capture of a lone Republican seat in Missouri reduced the GOP net gain to five seats.

A Democratic underdog, Senator William Benton (D., Conn.) outran expectations to save the Democrats even more embarrassment. Benton's margin over Republican Prescott Bush was less than 1000 votes and may face a recount. If Bush should win the recount, a stalemating tie would split the Senate down the political middle.

[The Associated Press reported from New Haven that Republican State Chairman Clarence F. Baldwin had announced his party will demand a recount.—Editor's note.]

What happened Tuesday?

GOP Chairman Gabrielson said the Democratic reverse reflected opposition "to appeasement of socialism" and "socialism" in America.

Unhappy Democrats conceded privately that anti-Communist sentiment played a part in the upset.

Stress Laid on Korea War

They laid more stress, however, on these other factors.

The grave late turn in the Korean war.

Probably "overzealous" labor activity to defeat Taft, resented by many Midwestern farmers.

The Kefauver Crime Committee's "rich cop" exposures in Chicago. They atributed defeat of Lucas and four Chicago Democratic Congressmen to this factor alone.

The New York mayoralty split. They said bullet voting for Vincent Impelliteri, elected independent candidate for mayor, accounted for Governor Dewey's reelection.

One fact appeared obvious, that the Midwestern farmers in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, who swung the 1948 balance in favor of President Truman, had swung back once again into the Republican fold.

In all of New England, for example, the Democrats lost only one House seat—that of Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse in Connecticut.

Net Loss of 1 in New York

In populous New York, where the risks were far greater, they suffered only a net loss of one. In Pennsylvania, a bellwether in most other elections, they dropped only two.

But in Indiana and Ohio, where the Democrats gained most 1948 ground, they were hit hardest this time. Five Democratic House seats were liquidated by Indiana voters. In Ohio, four Democratic seats were lost to Republicans and one to an independent, Frazier Reams.

Aching-back Democrats, who had counted on a virtual stand-off in both States, still aren't sure "what happened" there.

The House election put a Democrat in the seat of the lone member of the left-wing American Labor Party, and substituted Republican faces for many a well-known Democrat. But the entire House Democratic leadership survived the storm intact.

Annual Smoker Booked

The annual "smoker" of the Washington section of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will be held at 8 p. m. today in the New Melody Ballroom, 34th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne.

But in the still stunned Senate, it was the Democratic leadership that took the severest beating.

Committees Shaken Up

In addition to the top leaders, Lucas and Myers, these important committees were shaken up:

Armed Services—Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) chairman, was defeated by Republican John Marshall Butler. Under the seniority rule of succession, Senator Russell will become Armed Services chairman.

Labor — Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), chairman, was defeated by Wallace F. Bennett (R.), former NAM president. Senator James E. Murray (D., Mont.) will succeed Thomas as Labor chairman.

Agriculture—this chairmanship was thrown open in the primaries when Representative Mike Monroney (D., Okla.) defeated Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), chairman. Monroney was elected Tuesday. Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) will become Agriculture chairman.

Chairmen Reelected

Among the key chairmen who were reelected were Connecticut's Brien McMahon, head of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee; Georgia's Walter George, Finance Committee; Nevada's Pat McCarran, Judiciary Committee; Arizona's Carl Hayden, Rules Committee; and South Carolina's Olin Johnston, Postoffice Committee.

New Senate Republican faces will include Herman Welker of Idaho, who takes over Senator Glen Taylor's old seat, and Representative Richard Nixon (R., Calif.), of "Pumpkin Papers" fame; who will occupy the seat of retiring Democratic Senator Sheridan Downey. Missouri's Senator Forrest Donnell (R.) will step aside for the Democrat's lone Senate pick-up Thomas G. Hennings, jr.

GOVERNORS—Fm. Pg. 1

consin, Walter J. Kohler, jr.; Wyoming, Frank A. Barrett.

Out of the 17 Democratic Governors in the 33 States they started with, the Democrats Tuesday were able to save only 10. Of these 7 were in the South. The 10 successful candidates were:

Alabama, Gordon Persons; Arkansas, Sidney S. McMath; E. Talmadge; Massachusetts, Paul A. Dever; Ohio, Frank J. Lausche; Oklahoma, Johnston Murray; Rhode Island, Dennis J. Roberts; South Carolina, James F. Barnes; Tennessee, Gordon Browning; Texas, Allan Shivers.

While the governorship races that attracted the most attention were those for reelection of Dewey in New York, Bowles in Connecticut, Lausche in Ohio, Lane in Maryland and Warren in California, the balloting was marked by other surprising upsets.

For instance, few expected the Democratic candidate, G. Mennen Williams, to put up the tough battle he staged in Michigan, where the result was in doubt until late last night. In Arizona, a woman candidate, Mrs. Ana Frohmiller, was confidently expected to carry that normally Democratic State.

Likewise, observers were startled by the loss of Democrat Vail Pittman in Nevada. In New Mexico, the defeat of Democrat John E. Miles, a hand-picked candidate of Senator Clinton P. Anderson, was laid to internal Democratic strife. The primary fight split the long-standing friendship between Anderson and his senatorial colleague, Dennis Chavez.

McKeldin Margin a Record personal appeal of McKeldin, who stormed the State, used his tremendous personal appeal to garner votes right and left, and (2) John Marshall Butler, his senatorial running mate, whose vitriolic attacks against Tydings' record kept the veteran legislator on the defensive throughout the campaign.

With some scattered returns from the State's 1429 polling places still being counted, here was the picture late today on the standing of the candidates:

McKeldin, 348,899; Lane, 262,084, with 1353 precincts reporting.

Butler, 309,208; Tydings, 267,827, with 1353 precincts reporting.

Attorney General Hall Hammond (D), 277,517; William A. Gunter, 234,957, with 1343 precincts reporting.

In the Fifth Congressional District, returns from 150 of 151 precincts gave Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D.) of Upper Marlboro 53,710 votes to 40,069 for Thomas S. Carr (R.) of Annapolis.

In the Sixth Congressional District, returns from 262 of 291 precincts gave Representative J. Glenn Beall (R), 56, of Frostburg, 64,065 votes against his opponent, Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle, USA, ret., of Hagerstown, who polled 40,317.

Other congressional races:

First District: Incumbent Representative Edward T. Miller (R), 55, of Easton, had 32,154 to 23,976 for State Senator Thomas F. Johnson (D), 41, of Berlin, on the basis of returns from 198 of 207 polling places.

Third District: Incumbent Representative Edward A. Garmatz (D) had 27,355 votes to 14,421 for Louis R. Milio (R), 25, on the basis of unofficial returns from all 106 precincts.

Fourth District: Representative George H. Fallon (D.), 44, had 34,710 votes to 25,322 for James W. Miller (R.), 55, on the basis of complete and unofficial returns.

High in importance among the referendum questions settled by Marylanders in Tuesday's vote was the 3 to 1 ratification of the anti-subversive Ober law.

Other questions settled by referendum in the general election, on the basis of incomplete returns, apparently had been decided as follows:

1. A Constitutional convention will be called to revise the State's basic law, almost unchanged for 80 years.

2. The present number of members in the Maryland House of Delegates will be frozen.

3. Judges win the power to decide whether the State has submitted enough evidence to convict a person of a crime.

4. Chief Deputy Comptroller and Treasurer, as well as the Comptroller and Treasurer, will be permitted to sign bonds or other State debt certificates.

5. The courts may send a man to jail for failing to pay alimony or support dependent children.

Closest vote was on a proposal to give a session of the Maryland General Assembly power to reconsider a Governor's pocket or post-session veto. The vote from 844 of 1429 precincts was 74,468 for the proposal and 58,939 against.

County Heads Face Ax

that a close race was in store, but believed their party packed enough polling power to extend its domination for another four-year term.

John R. Fletcher, GOP State Central Committee chairman and successful candidate for State senator, said yesterday morning that he was "very pleasantly surprised" with the results.

The results showed, he said, that the people had their minds made up before they came to the polls.

Admitting that the Republicans could never have pulled off their coup without opposition aid, Fletcher declared "we owe a great debt of gratitude to those Democrats who put us in office."

Probably the most succinct estimate of the public frame of mind leading to the overthrow of the Democratic machine came from John F. Lillard, jr., elected to the House.

"They were fed up," he snapped, referring to the citizens of the county.

Democratic Party Boss Lansdale G. Sasscer, who salvaged his congressional seat from the wreckage of the Democratic slate, said several factors contributed to the downfall. Two he considered particularly significant.

These were the poor showing of Governor Lane which "pulled the county ticket down with him" and the repeal of the Declaration of Intentions Act which cut down the length of time new residents must live in the county before becoming eligible to vote.

"We were just caught in the national trend," moaned State Senator L. Harold Sothoron, who lost his seat to Fletcher.

Sothoron also declared the "apartment vote" of "uninformed" new residents worked against the Democrats.

Among jobs which appear to be in the line of fire are those of clerk and deputy clerk to the county commissioners, county attorney, county engineer, comptroller, superintendent and assistant superintendent of Prince Georges General Hospital, director of recreation, assistant State's attorney, several deputy sheriffs and legal counsels to a number of boards and agencies.

Democrats who escaped the landslide were Leroy Pumphrey and Perry O. Wilkinson, House of Delegates incumbents; Lansdale G. Clagett, incumbent judge of the Orphan's Court; Circuit Court Clerk W. Waverly Webb, and Ben Dyer, unopposed as county surveyor.

British, Nationalists Row Over Replacing Chinese Delegates to FAO

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Three widely contrasting developments yesterday marked the fifth aniversary of the founding of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, at the FAO conference here.

1. Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan and Chief Judge Marvin Jones of the Court of Claims, one of the founders of FAO, joined in a ceremony to celebrate the anniversary and to say farewell to FAO, which moves to Rome early next year.

2. Delegates of the United Kingdom and Nationalist China engaged in a spirited row over a petition by the British that the so-called "peoples' government" of China (Communist) be given the place on FAO now held by Chiang Kai-shek's government.

3. Delegates learned through the ever-active grapevine that the ambition of FAO's officials to set up an international food allocation board under FAO direction is doomed to disappointment.

The Chinese-British argument at the morning's plenary session not only was heated, but took most delegations by surprise. The British didn't press the matter, however, and the present China delegation apparently will be permitted to continue in the conference, which is expected to end Saturday.

Secretary General Vielette Lavalle of the conference disclosed the British request. He reported that the UK delegation had asked the general committee on voting rights that the Nationalists Chinese delegation be denied permission to vote and that Communist China be granted the privilege. The request was immediately seconded by the Yugoslav delegation.

The action surprised many delegates because it had recently been reported that the United Kingdom was considering withdrawing earlier recognition of Communist China, owing to the entrance of Chinese troops into the fighting in Korea. Some saw in the FAO request a move by the British to contradict such reports.

Dr. Chen Chih-mai, Chinese delegate, at once denounced the British action. He added that not only was it surprising, but the way in which it was transmitted to the conference was unusual. He asked why the request to deny China a vote was not given directly to the conference by the British. He also pointed out that FAO was supposed to be nonpolitical, and not a forum for such debates.

In reply, Sir Ralph Enfield, chief of the UK delegation, stated that the British wanted the request to unseat the Chinese Nationalists included in the record "as a reflection of our well-known views." He did not press for action, and the matter rested there.

In his report to the conference, Director-General Norris E. Dodd last week pointed out that demand for some agricultural products had become intensified since the Korean outbreak. Most important, he said, are wool and rubber. He added that "rice also has been affected, and, to a lesser extent, cotton, coffee and cocoa."

"Governments already are discussing with each other the possibilities of controlling the movement . . . through international action," he said. He suggested that FAO might furnish the machinery for such control.

Dodd's suggestion has met with distinct coolness from American officials, particularly the State Department. Some other United States officials believe any international board, such as the wartime Combined Food Board, would be ineffective at this time. At any rate, it is certain that if any such international action is undertaken it will be through FAO.

There are two reasons behind the American decision. First, the United States feels it can exercise more influence over such a board through a smaller group than FAO or through unilateral or bilateral action. Second, it wants the group directing such allocations near by. FAO in its new headquarters in Rome will be too far removed from the center of food supplies ever to be considered for international food allocation activities.

Furthermore, one American official said, preliminary discussions on an agreement on allocating scarce agricultural commodities so far has met only cool response from the producing countries having such supplies to allocate.

Taft's Victory

Senator Taft's impressive victory is being interpreted as a defeat for organized labor, but it would be much nearer the truth to say that it is a stinging rebuke to union leaders who thought they could deliver the labor vote to the candidate of their choice. The size of the pro-Taft vote clearly indicates that thousands of unorganized working men and women voted for a man denounced by the CIO and AFL as an enemy of labor. Moreover, Mr. Taft's good showing in urban districts, where labor is highly organized, suggests that a good many union members refused to follow the instructions of their leaders.

The Taft victory affords heartening evidence that the rank and file of workers have not been misled by demagogic appeals to class interests based upon the distortion of facts, or deceived by false charges that the Taft-Hartley Act is an infamous plot to destroy labor unions and enslave workers. Indeed, many workers no doubt realize that instead of threatening the existence of unions, the act lays the foundation for a sounder kind of labor organization by proscribing unfair practices that bring unions into disrepute. By requiring a financial accounting from union officials, the law also protects the rank and file of members from misappropriation of union funds.

Although Senator Taft's labor record was not the only issue in the campaign, it is generally agreed that it was the most decisive factor in bringing about his return to office by an overwhelming vote of confidence. His victory should be a warning to ambitious labor leaders that the organizations which they head are neither political parties nor partisan organizations, but aggregations of American workers who think for themselves and vote for the candidates of their own choosing.

Voters' Verdict

The election was not a sweeping revolt against the Truman Administration, but there can be no doubt that it has eclipsed the Fair Deal. The Democratic Party retains control of Congress, though by a smaller majority in the House and a slender margin of two seats in the Senate. In other words, the country narrowly missed the misfortune of divided control over the executive and legislative branches. Any realist must recognize, however, that President Truman has lost much of the influence that he exercised over Congress in the last two years.

Indicative of the losses suffered by the Administration are the defeats of Senator Lucas, the majority leader, and Senator Myers, the Democratic whip. Neither will be a great loss to the Senate as individual legislators, but their rejection strips the Administration of its existing leadership in the Senate and symbolizes the new order of affairs. Both will be replaced as Senators by strong Republicans—Everett Dirksen of Illinois and Governor Duff of Pennsylvania. In addition, the Democrats lost three Senate committee chairmen (one—Elmer Thomas—in the primaries). In contrast is the striking victory of Senator Taft, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee.

While the general trend of the shift is Republican, the voters displayed a remarkable degree of independence. In Connecticut they elected two Democratic Senators (McMahon and Benton) and repudiated the Democratic Governor, Chester Bowles. In Ohio they returned a Democratic Governor, Frank J. Lausche, while snowing under the Democratic candidate for the Senate. In New York, Senator Lehman, Democrat, easily held his seat while Republican Governor Dewey won a third term by a large majority. New York City voters retained Vincent Impellitteri as mayor in preference to both the Republican and regular Democratic candidates. In Oklahoma, Representative Monroney emphatically defied the general Republican trend to win a Senate seat. In general, the voters appear to have given more thought to individuals than to party labels. The large turnout for a mid-term election removes any suspicion that the outcome might reflect indifference.

The meaning of the election in terms of policy will be determined in part by the response of the Truman Administration to it. While it is a setback for the President, especially in view of his unrestrained appeal to the voters last Saturday, he has shown ability in the past to adjust his course, and he can do so again. Probably there will be changes in his Cabinet. Certainly there will have to be sharp changes in his relations with Congress. In the next two years he will be able to get a program enacted only if it has the approval of the new Democratic leaders in the Senate and a strong appeal to independent-minded legislators. We think it would be wise for the President to recognize at once that the Brannan and Ewing Plans are dead ducks and that the Taft-Hartley Act will not be repealed. The need is for a new program shaped in the light of our world responsibilities and the resources available for meeting them.

While some of the most bitter critics of the Administration's foreign policy were successful, certainly the vote as a whole was not a vote against the United Nations or against the policy this country is following in Korea. Nor was it a vote against the new policy of building up our military strength. Campaign criticism touching foreign policy was more oppositionist than isolationist. However, new techniques will be needed to assure the continued effectiveness of American free world leadership. More emphasis upon bipartisan policy-making in foreign affairs is indicated. The largest question mark that looms out of the election is whether President Truman can shift his political orientation so as to afford tactful and effective leadership of the middle-of-the road element that has come to the top in the Democratic Party and hold the support of a substantial number of middle-of-the-road Republicans on major issues.

Verge Of A Showdown

The peace of the world may hang on the answer that the Mao Tze-tung regime makes to the United Nations assurances that the Manchurian-Korean border and the Chinese interests on the Yalu will be respected. Time may permit a restatement of these assurances when the Chinese delegates arrive next week to attend the hearing on Formosa in the Security Council. Yesterday the Security Council, in addition, voted to hear the same delegates on Korea. Certainly it is imperative to leave no stone unturned in removing misunderstanding, though, judging from hostility that is being whipped up by the Peking government, the sands, alas, are rapidly running out.

An assurance of respect for another person's property does not constitute appeasement. It is the right thing, let alone the prudent thing, to do. There was wisdom in the comment of Carlos P. Romulo on the U. N. Korean Committee's assumption that Chinese troops were in Korea for some specific and limited Chinese objective: "In moments of crisis, even assumptions must be considered." However, prudence also dictates that at the same time the United Nations must be prepared for all eventualities. Too many times have we ignored our problems till they overwhelmed us, and this is a blunder worse than a crime. If the Chinese hordes start pouring over the frontier, a state of war with the United Nations will have occurred, and there will have to be a fresh look at the situation in that light.

How should action be taken? Nobody can contemplate with any composure the commitment of our young manhood to land warfare against the Chinese Communist masses. The Japanese war with China was an endless undertaking which sapped the vitality of a Spartan army, and it is a lesson everlastingly to keep in mind. China is a gigantic sponge. A collision on the border, of course, could not be avoided in case a full-fledged Chinese intervention is attempted. But for our land forces this ought to be regarded as a holding operation, preliminary to withdrawal from Korea, for Korea is no place to bottle up the flower of our army in case of a general conflagration.

If the worst came to the worst on the Manchurian-Korean frontier, the wisest strategy, it seems to us, would be to have the showdown with the Russians, not the Chinese. The fact is, the last war wholly vindicated the Hitler-first decision—to take on the big fellow first. We agree with Mr. Stassen's thesis that this country cannot afford a second experience of local treatment. If Peking takes no notice of the U. N. assurances, then the United States should arraign the Soviet Union before the United Nations, with the view of presenting Moscow with an ultimatum, failure to comply with which would be followed by atomic war.

The use of atomic weapons is beginning to be thought of as somehow immoral. This is to play, this has already played, into the hands of the enemy. Indeed, the greatest success that the Russians have had in recent years has been the "selling" of this idea to millions of our people in the free world through such transparent devices as the Stockholm peace petition. They have imposed a sort of demobilization upon us which must be resisted if this country is to survive. But let us pray that the worst will not come to the worst, and that the Chinese will not force our hand.

Virginia's Vote

Election results in Virginia are a curious mixture. No one could have seriously doubted that Representative Howard W. Smith would triumph over Republican Tyrrell Krum for his eleventh term in the House. Mr. Smith actually increased the margin over Krum he enjoyed in the 1948 race, though he lost Arlington and recouped his lead with a heavy downstate vote. For the most part congressional races elsewhere in the Old Dominion had been decided earlier in the Democratic primary.

In Arlington the jubilation is mixed with sadness. Chairman Daniel Dugan of the county board was reelected in a nonpartisan victory, and the vital $2,617,000 bond issue to provide new sewage treatment facilities carried by a heavy majority. But the $7,450,000 school bond issue lost by the dismaying vote of 7830-7450. The defeat of this school expansion plan probably means that 3000 children must go on half-day sessions next fall. The very closeness of the vote, however, means that it cannot be considered a repudiation of better schools. Rather, in our opinion, it reflects a misunderstanding of the work of the present school board—misunderstanding fostered by the last-minute effort of Treasurer John Locke Green and others to confuse the issue with charges of extravagance. These charges were based upon the questionable premise that necessary additions such as laboratories are "frills." Some voters, too, probably were perplexed by the ballot phrase "Shall Arlington County contract a debt . . . ?" which did not appear before the sewer question. The vote certainly is an instruction to the school board to economize. However, the board also must come back to the voters with a smaller bond issue at the first opportunity if children are not to be penalized.

The swing of the Fairfax County referendum was equally unexpected. As recently as Sunday champions of the county executive plan of government, which won 5210-3502, were predicting victory for the county manager plan. The explanation seemingly lies in the strange instruction of the Democratic machine to its adherents to vote against change in the first place, but then for the county executive plan. Advocates of change were strong enough to carry the first question, but on the second the machine vote which had been negative on the first question combined with votes of persons seeking a middle-road improvement to carry the executive plan. Regardless of the form chosen, the fact that a change has been voted is of tremendous importance. Advocates of better government now will have to concentrate on redistricting and on selecting top caliber men for the 1952 change.

Alexandria and Falls Church local issues were confined principally to whether the city attorney should be elected or appointed by the council. The voters showed a mistrust of appointive officials —though this increases the danger of a deadlock. The point on which everyone can rejoice in nearby Virginia is the new record vote for an off-year election.

Corralling Criminals

Indictment of Harry Russell, the Chicago racketeer who refused to tell the Kefauver Crime Investigating Committee about his relations with a Miami gambling syndicate, is one of the many blows the underworld is sustaining at the committee's hands. The 60-count contempt citation of Russell amounts to throwing the book at him. To be sure, the committee's purpose is not punishment as such, but exposure. To achieve this purpose, however, the investigators must be relentless in getting at the facts. There is some indication that Russell may have been sacrificed by other recalcitrant underworld big shots who have taken it on the lam. Thus the committee has more work to do; there is no reason to believe that it will be satisfied merely with Russell's indictment.

As a matter of fact, it is hard to remember when there has been so much stir in the lush criminal empire. The Kefauver Committee has struck almost simultaneously in Miami, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Kansas City and other centers. The Miami sheriff, James A. Sullivan, has been indicted for condoning gambling and corruption, and it now appears that he may face further charges because he did not tell the committee the whole story about his personal wealth. In Chicago Police Capt. Daniel Gilbert, a candidate for sheriff, has been hard put to it to explain how he amassed a fortune of $360,000 on his $9000 salary as chief investigator for the State's attorney's office. The fact that the committee has gone ahead vigorously with its investigations in predominantly Democratic strongholds is a credit to the nonpartisan character of the inquiry, despite some Republican attempts to depreciate it.

Moreover, the fact that organized gambling has been involved in virtually every one of the exposures so far is an effective answer to those who have been disposed to sneer at the role of gambling in corrupting law enforcement. But the committee can only expose; it is up to local communities to follow through with prosecutions. The time to hit the criminals is when they are on the run, for if they are allowed time to regroup they will find new fields to muscle into.

The Age Factor

Now that the election is over, more than a few Republicans in New York must be keenly aware of the absurdity of nominating a man 74 years of age for a first term in the United States Senate. No doubt the defeat of Lieut. Gov. Joe R. Hanley will be attributed largely to the indiscreet letter that he wrote to Congressman Macy. But we suspect that many voters were provoked by the impropriety of trying to launch a man on a new and strenuous career with which he is entirely unfamiliar at an age beyond what is customary for retirement. The result was to put Mr. Hanley in the hospital before the campaign was over, and he remained there over election day, being too ill to vote.

One has to remember, of course, that Mr. Hanley is only two years older than Senator Lehman, who defeated him. But at least Mr. Lehman has been in the Senate for a year. He will not be starting a strenuous new career at 74. When men of that age are pressed into important nominations they do not want, simply because of the vote-getting appeal that is supposed to be attached to their names, the voters would be lacking in intelligence if they failed to do what they did on Tuesday in the Lehman-Hanley contest.

Letters To The Editor

Election Oracle

The writer is quite perturbed regarding the lack of public confidence in the newspaper polls ever since the 1948 presidential disaster. I am hereby submitting my own poll, which successfully predicted President Truman's election in 1948 and Roosevelt's re-election to a third and fourth term. As a result of 20 years of experimentation, I have developed a revolutionary scientific mathematical principle which accurately interprets the "undecided block" many months in advance.

(1.) In Ohio, I regret to report that Senator Taft will be defeated.

(2.) In New York, I regret to report that Governor Dewey will be defeated.

(3.) In California, there will be a "photo finish"—which is contrary to what the pollsters are indicating when they pick Warren to win very decisively and by a wide margin. In my humble opinion, James Roosevelt has been gaining tremendous strength in recent weeks. I believe Roosevelt does have a chance to win, contrary to pollsters who give him no chance whatsoever.

(4.) Senator Lehman will win by a thumping majority in New York.

(5.) As a result of the foregoing, together with sudden and unexpected adverse war developments in Europe and the Orient, there will be a panic on Wall Street. JOHN E. SATO.

Ravena, Ohio.

"Schools And Sewers"

I was surprised to read in your editorial of November 4 the unreasoning criticism of a "small group representing the Arlington Ridge Civic Association" which had earlier released a report on Arlington County school construction costs.

It simply is not true that "the names of some of the 'signers' of this report appear to have been used without their knowledge." All members of the committee appointed to this task contributed to some portion of the report, all heard the report read in toto, and concurred.

So far as the comparison of Arlington costs with those of nearby areas is concerned, the data and details are shown in our report; they were obtained from the school authorities of the areas named, some in writing, some orally by personal interview by members of our committee. Why, then, should the Arlington cost figures be "sacred" and the Montgomery, Prince Georges and Alexandria figures be "misleading?" So far as the architect's comments made at the recently held and hastily arranged meeting by the Arlington board, all I can say is that there is a 6 percent fee on seven million dollars worth of construction to be anticipated in the near future.

EMMA C. JOHNSON.

Arlington.

Editor's Note: One member of the committee has confirmed to The Washington Post that she did not see the final report and that her signature was used without her knowledge or consent.

Also, in a communication published in this newspaper on November 6, Mrs. Kathryn H. Stone, vice president of the Arlington Ridge Civic Association, asserted: "Copies of this long and involved report . . . were never furnished the responsible officers of the civic association for study. Some of them heard it read aloud at an executive committee meeting which was called unexpectedly, and on 24 hours' notice, for a weekend night. Copies of the report were released to the press before the membership heard a thing about it. Officers unavoidably absent from the executive committee meeting were not informed either . . . Some few members of the association were apparently willing to take any tactic to influence the preelection campaign on the school bond issue to their way of thinking."

Chinese Intervention

Ever since the Korean invasion and our intervention there on behalf of the U. N. we have been constantly hearing from our leaders, the press, and the radio that we do not wish to be entangled with China and its vast land space and hordes of people and that we are doing everything to avoid a clash with them. This in my opinion gave the Chinese leaders conclusive evidence of our fear of them and helped their unscrupulous masters, the Russians, to influence them to now intervene with a considerable force against the U. N. and particularly the United States.

Allowing that we are afraid of the Chinese intervention, do we have to shout it on the roof tops and make everybody see how terrified we are? Would it not have been more impressive and true if we announced our strength in the last world war against Japan and Germany and now against the North Koreans? If we had told the Chinese Communists that we can bomb every city within range of our bombers from Japan, Korea, Hong Kong and the Pacific islands might we not have put fear in their hearts? If we also told them we have the facilities to blockade their shores might not this have deterred them from their present intervention? Is not this the only language the Communists understand? ERIAN BOUTROS.

Falls Church, Va.

Knowledge Of Russia

I am grateful to Mary A. Gillespie for her excellent letter of November 6 on "Knowledge of Russia in Schools." The thesis of this well-known educator is the advisability of dropping our present ostrich-like head in the sand attitude toward the USSR and trying to acquire informative reading matter about Russia's economic system, instead of barring such publications from our school libraries.

THERESA H. RUSSELL.

Washington.

The claim of totality of knowledge for adolescents is very short-sighted. In fact it is downright silly. Even in adult college classes, certain knowledge is only passed out in monograph form to students who are specializing. Adolescence is an age of curiosity and is certainly not ready for all knowledge and should not be exposed to it.

LAURA K. POLLOCK.

Washington.

It seems to me, Miss Gillespie has based her lament on an unreal foundation.

As the mother of a recent high school graduate I would say the local high school student had exceptionally fine opportunities for access to the "totality of knowledge" in the availability of the Library of Congress. High school libraries are not distinguished by their possession of complete coverage in the world's literature. In fact our taxes could scarcely support such equipment. There are many gaps, not simply in the field of communism. But there are many opportunities available for learning and from my observation of local high school students there is no evidence that they suffer from censorship or suppression of ideas. MRS. E. S. PETERSEN.

Nationalists In Puerto Rico

I am one of the three-million Puerto Ricans living either in Puerto Rico or in continental United States. I feel very proud to be an American citizen and a humble member of this great family. The criminal attempt to kill our Governor Luis Munoz Marin and our President Harry S. Truman was a well organized plot of a group of Nationalists with two main purposes. The first was to "demonstrate" to the whole world that the United States is not well liked in Puerto Rico and that the United States is an imperialist nation. This will help the Communist propaganda here and over the whole world. The second motive was to prevent our people from registering for voting in the election to be held on June 4, 1951.

Out of a total of more than 2,200,000 Puerto Ricans, less than 500 are members of the Nationalist Party. They went to an election for the first time in 1932 and got only 5000 votes out of the 460,000 cast. After that they never went to any more elections because their followers were decreasing each year. Instead of going to the ballot box they want radicalism, terrorism and uprising.

With the exception of those radical Nationalists we all feel very proud of being American citizens. There are three political parties in the island—the Popular Party, the Statehood Party and the Independent Party. This last one has nothing to do with the Nationalist Party and they want independence for the island but in close friendship with the United States.

I noticed a report from Moscow announcing that the rebellion in Puerto Rico was caused by the sending of Puerto Rico's youths to fight in Korea and the forcing on the island of a new constitution by the United States. This statement is a great lie. We are American citizens and we have an army that is part of the United States Army that is fighting communism in close friendship with the United Nations.

Moscow was lying when it reported that the new constitution was forced on us by the United States. They should know a little more about us and our elections. The Popular Party which won the last election by a very great majority was ordered by the people to work out the procedures for our new constitution. The second political party of the island, the Statehood Party, is also in favor of the constitution. Both together constitute 80 to 85 percent of the whole island population.

PUERTO RICAN.

Washington.

I believe that a way exists for pulling the Communists' charges from under them; namely, for Congress, on its return, to pass, and have the President sign, a resolution something like the following:

"In view of any misunderstanding that may have arisen from the recent disorders in Puerto Rico and the attempt on the President's life, we wish to make our position clear. The United States has no desire or intention to hold Puerto Rico by force contrary to the wishes of the people of that Territory. Therefore, we now pledge our word that if, at any time, a majority of the citizens of Puerto Rico vote to end their political connection with the United States, we will give our permission for them to do so."

HAROLD PEACOCK.

Washington.

Allow me to congratulate you for the very good editorial, "Assassins' Mania," published in your paper November 3.

The majority of the people of Puerto Rico love the American institutions, the good friend of Puerto Rico, President Harry Truman, and the American people.

DR. A. MONTALVO GUENARD.

Avoiding The Kremlin Touch

By Malvina Lindsay

A Living White House

FREE happy-go-lucky Americans are now entering on what is at best a long period of armed camp living. How far will the outer symbols of this have to be carried?

Already the proposal to make the White House a museum instead of a home, and to provide a family hideaway for the President, a la Stalin, has bobbed up again, and we will likely hear more of it as martial living adds more of the Kremlin touch to public institutions.

True, it was occasioned by the attempted assassination at Blair House. But it is disturbingly in keeping with the growing mood of the times.

How soon will we see more guards around the Capitol and a stiffening up there of the informal democratic atmosphere that impresses so many foreign visitors and gives native ones a glow of pride in citizenship? How soon will more streets be roped off, more buildings require passes for entrance, more men in uniform be standing between the citizen and the people and places that represent him?

Some of these steps may become necessary. But in any tightening up of security there is always the tendency to take the easy, obvious step by which more may be lost than is gained.

TO MOVE the President out of the White House would be an example of this. Any President who acceded to it would soon find he had exchanged his birthright of closeness to the people for a mess of pottage in his privacy. For living in the White House is the biggest personal link between him and the people. The White House as a dead museum, or an office building or guest house, would never inspire the same intimate affection it now arouses from every American who sees it in reality or picture.

All the years of living, of joy and tragedy that have gone on behind its marble columns have steadily built about it an emotional aura that no other public building has. Let this living cease, and to Americans of any sensitivity whatever it would become a relic, if not a tomb. Even though it might retain its memories it would have little personal relation to the President in office, the elected leader of the people.

The White House as the residence of the Chief Executive is also the greatest advertisement of the American system. What it means to foreign visitors was best expressed in a broadcast on impressions of Washington that Elias Venezis, Greek journalist and author, gave to his fellow countrymen on the Voice of America. Here is an excerpt:

"I am going to tell you about a green city and a white house. . . . We know it by the name of the 'White House.' The word mansion gives it a pompous tone, which is not really there.

"Its greatness lies in this: The President of the most powerful nation in the world lives in a small two-storied house. It is surrounded by evergreen trees. There is an exceptional white harmony about it, an intimacy with man. Each passerby on Pennsylvania ave. knows that out of that house comes a colossal strength. As long as he knows that this strength is his, he feels that it is friendly.

"OUTSIDE of the White House there is a man with a white shirt on with a metal badge on it—that's all—and he wears black trousers. He stands, or walks a little. He is the guard. Only when you are faced by the grandeur of such simplicity do you know how deep this happiness is—that there should be no fear, that the people should never have experienced fear. Neither themselves nor anyone else. They fear only the law, and God."

Yet the recent insane attempt on President Truman's life has aroused fears. The President should now be more carefully guarded. But to put him and his family in some remote estate or hideaway will not increase his safety unless he is to live the life of a hermit, forego his walks, trips, public addresses (what the Secret Service men fear most are crowds), go to his office in an armored car or an underground tunnel.

Moreover, this last attempt at assassination was the first one ever made on a President's residence. Lincoln was shot while in a theater, Garfield in the Union Station, McKinley at the Buffalo Fair, Franklin Roosevelt was shot at while on a Florida trip.

True, a President might relish the privacy of family life a retreat would give him. But everyone in public office in a republic sacrifices some privacy—often gets in return a big tonic of adulation. Any President's biggest handicap from the public is not its curiosity, its invasion of his privacy, so much as its tendency to unjust blame and to failure to strengthen his hand as leader, when he and the Nation most need it.

Assassin's Pardon

Would it not be an inspired gesture—and, I may add, not out of keeping with President Truman's and the American character—if the President, when the time comes, were to have the man who tried to kill him pardoned and deported? I admit there is no precedent, but I feel that Lincoln would have acted so, and after all, we live in abnormal times.

Such an act on President Truman's part would not only prevent a gangster from being held up as a martyr; it would proclaim to all the world that the standards of Washington are not those of Moscow. In short, it would be good propaganda, and propaganda is one of our chief weapons.

A Communication

La Fortaleza And The Blair House

By James A. Hoyt

Reporter, United States Court of Claims

LA FORTALEZA and the Blair House. What a contrast! But both within the last few days have been the scene of violence and assassination by the same set of alleged "Revolutionists."

When President Roosevelt in 1934 returned from a visit to Puerto Rico, he directed that the Home Owners Loan Corporation, of which I was then assistant general manager, make an investigation of conditions in the island with a view of opening an office there to relieve conditions. I was given the unwelcome assignment and instructed to make a survey of the housing conditions in the island and report whether the HOLC could be of any assistance.

On arrival at San Juan our first duty of course was to call on the Governor, who was Gen. Blanton Winship, USA, retired, every inch a soldier and gentleman!

The Governor, a bachelor, had his office and residence in La Fortaleza—referred to in recent news dispatches as the Governor's Palace. But it is in fact "the Fortress." It was there that only a few days ago the attempt was made to assassinate the present Governor, Luis Munoz Marin, the first native Puerto Rican to be Governor.

As I recollect it, La Fortaleza is at the end of one of San Juan's narrow streets, a dead-end street. The only entrance is through a street level basement, so to speak, and here is police headquarters, where a guard was always posted. Up one flight of stairs was the Governor's office, and also the office of the chief of police, who at that time was Captain Riggs, a former officer in the United States Army.

The Governor's living quarters were in another part of La Fortaleza. These quarters looked out on the lovely tropical garden in the rear, which reminded me of Charleston, and then out on the lovely blue waters of the sea. When the Governor entertained us at luncheon, we sat on the porch with this vista before us. A beautiful and peaceful scene.

This fortress has been there for 400 years. It has withstood storm, hurricane, riots and revolutions. It is of solid masonry, with walls so thick I would hesitate to estimate their depth. Only a crazed fanatic could conceive of penetrating this place.

MY ONE pleasant anticipation of going to Puerto Rico was seeing Robert A. Cooper, then United States District Judge there. Two years later in 1936, Judge Cooper presided at the trial of Pedro Albizu Campos and his eight associates, tried and convicted of conspiracy to overthrow the Government. Judge Cooper sentenced them to terms of from four to eight years in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, and they served their terms. On June 7, 1937, the day Albizu was committed to the penitentiary, seven men waylaid the judge's car on a San Juan street and fired a volley of more than 30 shots into it but Judge Cooper was not hurt, nor was his driver nor the detective assigned to guard him.

Captain Riggs was not so fortunate as was Judge Cooper. In 1935, I think it was, he was assassinated by members of the same Albizu Nationalist group, who had drawn lots to see who would kill him. He was shot down on the street. Riggs was, according to my recollection, a Washingtonian.

It was Pedro Albizu Campos, leader of the Nationalist Party, whose letters were found on the person of Grisello Torresola, shot down by the White House police in front of the Blair House last Wednesday. Albizu is under arrest in San Juan, along with some of his associates. Others of his associates are being hunted.

When volley after volley of pistol shots rang out on the sultry air of last Wednesday afternoon, I was sitting in my office in the rear of the Court of Claims building, from the window of which I have so frequently in the last two years seen President Truman come and go on his daily schedule—punctual to the minute. So many times I have thought of the needless chance he has taken, living temporarily in such an exposed and indefensible position. When we have watched him go into the Blair House and leave it and his car emerge into the street, there have been sighs of real relief that he has traversed his route in safety.

That he could be adequately protected only through the sacrifice of the lives and safety of others was amply demonstrated by the insane attempt of these Puerto Rican revolutionists to get at him through the well-guarded front door—how well guarded they apparently did not know.

These are brave men and true, these White House police and Secret Service men. Well trained and on their toes, crack marksmen, alert. But they are also courteous gentlemen. Many times we have seen tourists and others step up to their booths, asking directions to this building and that, and receiving courteous replies. Those who work in the Court of Claims building, from the judges down the list, passing these posts several times a day, had come to feel that they knew these fine neighbors, who responded so courteously to their salutations, and the favorite of them all was Pvt. Leslie Coffelt, with his ready smile. But his gun was ready too and he got his man.

It is lonely duty, this sentry job. Very lonely on Pennsylvania ave., with pedestrians passing all the time, and tourists in their cars slowing up to get a look at the President's residence, set only a very few feet back from the sidewalk—all so truly American.

To protect the President in such a location not only endangers the lives of those who are charged with this high duty, but also the lives of any innocent citizens, men and women, who might be about their business, not only in front of the Blair House, but in the rear, when a crazed fanatic attempts assassination.

The Blair House is no La Fortaleza. It is just an old American home.

Action On Inflation

By Marquis Childs

No Room For Partisanship

FOR FIVE or six weeks during a singularly irrelevant election campaign the politics of things past seems to have predominated. To step into the close of this campaign is to experience the curious sensation of living backward.

Childs

Apparently under the rules of the game any discussion of matters relevant to the enormous tasks ahead of the country was strictly forbidden. If you talked about such things, you risked being called offside and penalized. I'm sure there were exceptions to this rule, courageous and notable exceptions. But the rule of irrelevance seems to have prevailed over large areas.

What is equally apparent is that while all this was going on, things did not stand still either at home or abroad. Above all, the national economy was not persuaded to do a still-pond-no-more-moving in the interval while officeholders and office seekers engaged in a political fan dance.

The pressure of rising prices is far more serious than it was six weeks ago. This is shown in retail prices indexes. But these levels continue to lag behind price rises in the wholesale field.

Wherever the control of Congress finally rests when all the votes are counted, there must be some action quickly to try to check the dangerous spiral. The present consumer price level is now very close to the all-time high recorded in August-September of 1948.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has indicated to those around him that he intends to move just as soon as the election is off the boards and politicians and public have had time to recover. But the way in which to move on this threat is not at all clear.

Some of the members of the President's official family are convinced that a considerable share of the blame falls on big business. They accuse industrialists of staging something like the sit-down strike that took place in 1940-41 when President Roosevelt was trying to force conversion from peacetime to wartime production.

Today the issue is expansion and the immediate focus of the controversy is steel. That industry will not expand unless Government pays the whole cost and then guarantees a profit on the new plants paid for with Government money is the indignant complaint in one wing of the Administration.

There is reason to believe the President shares their wrath. To one group at least he expressed the intention of calling Congress back as quickly as possible to pass a far stiffer excess-profits tax law than that which applied during World War II. Those urging him to take this line declare that the profit position of industry is even more favorable than it was in the boom years after VJ-Day.

But more cautious counsel comes from others around the President who take a less jaundiced view of the present position of industry. Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer goes right on saying that the remedy is wage and price controls in one form or other. As Sawyer sees it, the delay of six weeks has merely sharpened the need for the kind of Government action that was inevitable from the beginning.

IN THE camp of the wrathful is W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board. Just before the election he made two speeches that let off some of the steam he has been bottling up. But in the process of persuading businessmen to see the light, Symington really lets go.

A business executive in California was startled the other day by a call from Symington who proposed a somewhat unwelcome chore. When the executive demurred, Symington said, "Well, how far do you want the Russians to get before you move? Do they have to be in Portland or in Seattle?"

This is probably a reflection of the harassment of a back-breaking job. But it would seem to represent a growing sense of frustration eating at Government officials charged with carrying out the huge rearmament program.

In any real sense, of course, it is purely an illusion to talk about party control of Congress. President Truman has never been able to get action on the major points of his domestic program. Northern as well as Southern Democrats either ignore his requests or openly and eagerly defy him.

But there should be at least a minimum of unity to meet the frightening menace of inflation. That has nothing to do with partisanship. It directly concerns the well-being of every American regardless of party or prejudice. And the politicians of both parties must be made to realize it.

80 B-29s Destroy 90 Percent Of City on Manchuria Border

the Reds northwest of Pakchon. Many bodies were found.

Elements of the United States Twenty-fourth Division advanced as much as 3½ miles north of Kanu, 48 miles northwest of Pyongyang, without making contact with the enemy.

The United States First Cavalry elements north of Sukchon in that area were unable to locate the main body of enemy troops.

In Wednesday's big air blows, Sinuiju, the northwestern border supply base for the Chinese Reds, was pounded to rubble.

An Air Force spokesman said the town of Yongbyon, a Red town 54 air miles northwest of Pyongyang, "exists no more."

Pilots said the strike by 80 United States B-29s destroyed about 90 percent of Sinuiju, Korean city of 100,000 across the Yalu River from Antung, Manchuria.

As 600 planes of the United Nations' air arm blasted the North Korea border region in one of the war's largest aerial assaults, Allied foot soldiers punched out short gains all along the front.

Red forces continued an unexplained pullback from the northwest battle sector. But pilots said heavy traffic—apparently more men and supplies—was rolling across Manchuria toward Korea.

General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters ordered a temporary news blackout on developments between the battlefront and the Manchurian border.

Questions Go Unanswered

The U. N. commander's intelligence officers said they were unable to answer questions whether the Chinese and Korean Reds were planning an attack, consolidating their lines or preparing a series of delaying actions.

The Superfort assault on Sinuiju was unopposed by Red airmen, although Communists had planes based in both Sinuiji and its twin city of Antung across the Yalu.

About two hours before the bombers thundered over, United States' F-80 jets shot down one Russian-made MIG-15 jet fighter and damaged another over Sinuiji—the first jet-to-jet combat in history.

F-51 Mustang pilots said they damaged three other MIG jets, among the world's fastest, in dog fighting Wednesday.

The B-29s hit Sinuiju with more than 600 tons of bombs, including 85,000 incendiary bombs and 80 demolition bombs of 1000 pounds each.

Smoke Shoots Up 50,000 Feet

Explosives also were dropped on the twin bridges spanning the Yalu. Observers reported "satisfactory results," but would not list the bridges as definitely knocked out until aerial photographs are examined.

Sinuiju was a chemical manufacturing center and a big lumbering and mining center before the war. The main railroad and highway from Pyongyang to Mukden runs through Sinuiju.

A jet pilot who watched the B-29s smash the city said that smoke pillars rose more than 50,000 feet after the attack and the entire city "looked like it was on fire."

While B-29s worked over Sinuiju, B-26 light bombers, fighter-bombers and fighters hit cities, towns, bridges and troop concentrations all along the Korean border almost to Russian Siberia.

The Fifth Air Force said its planes on ground-support missions destroyed 14 Red tanks and damaged six others Wednesday. Fighter-bombers destroyed 75 Red supply vehicles moving toward the northwest front.

Marine Corsairs tore at Red troop concentrations all along the northeast front Wednesday and pilots reported they may have cut down 2000 Chinese and Korean Communist soldiers.

They said they virtually destroyed an entire Chinese battalion moving down to reinforce the battered 124th Chinese Red Division facing a United States Marine attack below the Changjin Reservoir.

Two Marine pilots reported they were fired on by 5-inch radar-controlled antiaircraft guns as they flew near the Manchurian border. The fire came from the Manchurian side of the border near Manpojin, 70 miles northeast of the Changjin Reservoir.

Army spokesman described Allied ground action Wednesday as "aggressive patrolling."

This was the general picture:

Northwest front—The United States Twenty-fourth Division and the British Brigade made short gains in the Packchon area. The U. S. First Cavalry threw back stiff Red probing attacks. The U. S. Second Division put elements into the Oechang area. The South Korean Sixth, Seventh and Eighth Divisions reported gains around Kunu, Won and Tokchon. Twenty thousand civilian refugees have passed through the Allied Chongchon River bridgehead, going south. These points are on an arching front roughly 50 miles north of the fallen Red Capital of Pyongyang and 70 miles or more from the Manchurian border.

Northeast Front—U. S. Marines advanced toward the Changjin Reservoir in an ominous calm. Chinese and Korean Red resistance had fallen off sharply, and they wanted to know where the Reds had gone before they pushed ahead too far.

Briefing officers conceded the enemy might push down from north-central Korea and cut off the northeast from from the northwest front.

South Korean Capital Division elements advanced 12 miles north of Myongchon near the east coast to within 100 miles of the Korean-Siberian brder.

There were no reports from the U. S. Third Division, newly landed at the east coast port of Wonsan.

The U. S. Twenty-fifth Division operated against by-passed Reds around Kumchon in deep-south Korea.

Formosa Says Reds Going To Manchuria Revolted

TAIPEI, Formosa, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalist Defense Ministry today said a Communist division being transferred to Manchuria revolted a week ago in Central China.

The Ministry said the division thought it was being moved to its home province, Yunnan, and unrest developed when the troops learned they were being shifted instead to Manchuria for possible use in Korea. It added that most of the troops joined Nationalist guerillas in the area.

Big Underground Arsenal Found Near Ex-Capital

WITH U. S. SECOND DIVISION, Nov. 7 (Delayed).—A big underground arsenal found north of Pyongyang was stocked with U. S., Russian and Japanese machinery, an investigating officer said today.

Patrols of the U. S. Second Division found the plant in a lead mine about 30 miles northeast of the former North Korean capital.

Lieut. Col. Richard Gordon, Portland, Me., the division's chemical officer, said the arsenal turned out Russian-model burp (rapid-fire) guns, ammunition and mortar parts.

He said one of the former workers and two villagers told him seven Russians supervised production.

They told him the plant was moved from Pyongyang to the mine in August. It operated around the clock with an estimated 600 workers until U. S. parachute troops dropped nearby last month.

Air and Ground Attacks . . .

HUGE AIR SWEEP—Allied warplanes yesterday blasted North Korea all along the Manchurian border (blast symbols) to block Red reinforcements. The heaviest concentration of bombing was in the Sinuiju area (A), concentration point of Red supplies. Columns of Reds (open arrows) were still reported moving southward from the Yalu River border. At Wonsan (B) elements of the United States Third Infantry Division were landed. The broken line indicates the present battlefront in Korea escaped across the Manchurian border.

Stevens said the Communist jets "seemed to want to get us across the border and gave no indication that they really wanted to fight on our side."

United States planes are under strict orders to remain on the Korean side.

"We had been strafing gun positions at Sinuiju when the appearance of enemy aircraft was first reported by our air defense controllers," said Stephens.

Brown was flying on his wing. A second element composed of Lieut. Ralph N. Giel, Cleveland, Ohio, and Second Lieut. Richard D. Escola, Livingston, Calif., was several thousand feet below.

"When Brown and I reached 20,000 feet I sighted from eight to 12 MIG-15s about 30 miles south of the Yalu River," Stephens said.

"Two of them were pulling up out of their dive and turning toward the river at exactly our altitude. I called to the rest of my flight to come on up—that we had two of them cornered.

"I turned into the first MIG, but he was just out of effective range and was diving for the border, so I pulled the second MIG into my sight and fired. Debris flew off his wing tip and he went into a dive and got away across the border."

"I peeled off after him with full power in an almost vertical dive," Brown said. "The MIG was diving at the same nearly vertical angle too. Both were doing more than 600 miles per hour.

Brown said the first MIG, which dived out of range of Stephens, was closer to him.

"The MIG was not pulling away from me but I wasn't closing the gap. I was at extreme effective firing range.

"After two or three seconds of my machinegun fire digging into his engine section, I saw the engine area begin to smoke and then the engine exploded. The MIG pilot did not get out and the plane went into the ground."

Maryland Man Pays $70,500 for Bull

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio, Nov. 8 (AP).—Proceeds of an auction of 60 Hereford cattle totaled $268,100 at Hillcrest Farms here yesterday. Auction officials said the average price of about $4468 per animal may be a national record. Hillcrest Larry IV, a 3-year-old, 1900-pound bull, sold for $70,500, a world record price. The bull was the international stock show grand champion last year. He was purchased by Chino Farms of Church Hill, Md., owend by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sears.

Red Propaganda Move in U. N. Asks For Free Eritrea

LAKE SUCCESS, Nov. 8 (NYHT).—Immediate independence for Eritrea, the only former Italian colony in Africa whose political future has not been decided, was asked by the Soviet Union in a resolution presented to the special political committee of the United Nations General Assembly here today.

An obvious propaganda move, the resolution was offered in the face of a mass of evidence that the Eritrean people are not ready for self-government and that, in fact, only a small minority of the population want it.

The measure calls also for the withdrawal of British occupation troops and cession to Ethiopia of enough territory to permit access to the sea through Assab, Eritrea's easternmost port.

Cow Rocks Boat, 2 Drown

WOODS HARBOR, Nova Scotia, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—A father and son were drowned today when a cow they were returning from an island pasture rocked their rowboat and it capsized. The victims were Charles Goreham and his son, Herbert.

Actress Asks Divorce

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Nov. 8 (AP).—Actress Joan Fontaine, 33, today sued Producer William Dozier for divorce, charging he "willfully deserted her." She asked custody and support payments for their child, Deborah, 2, but no alimony for herself.

The Washington Post brings you the final volumes of the personal letters of FDR. Published for the first time, the first installment of this private correspondence will appear on Sunday, November 12th.

OF BOOKS AND BRENTANO'S
Everything happens at Brentano's! The latest was a dogfight. A collie mixed it up with a bull terrier in the corner by the reference books. The battle progressed down the aisle to new fiction, frightening a little old lady browsing through THE ADVENTURER ($3.50), and then across two aisles to biography, knocking three copies of THE COCKTAIL PARTY ($3.00) onto the floor en route. Tempers, leashes and spilt books were restored finally, the dogs departed haughtily, and, sighing imperceptibly we returned to the humdrum of the day . . . Which brings us to a shelf of books concerning man's occasional best friend. THE STORY OF LASSIE ($2.50) relates how the owner acquired a fractious 8-month-old pup for a ten-dollar board bill and developed the animal into a million-dollar movie star. A series of 50 obedience training lessons for all dogs, illustrated by Lassie, makes the book a fine all-round handbook on obedience training . . . A totally new approach to dog training (psychiatrists take notice!) is broached in TRAINING YOU TO TRAIN YOUR DOG ($3.00). Seems we've been attacking the problem from the wrong angle. The dog is all right, poor thing, it's the owner who needs training. Illustrations (of dogs, not owners) illuminate the procedure with clarity, and attest to the amazing success of the treatment . . . Dogs have a sympathetic quality all their own which can only be called 'dogginess,' and which is as apparent as can be in an intriguing new book entitled, logically, DOGS ($3.50). Ylla, the renowned photographer of animals, has taken scores of pictures of dogs of every size, shape, temperament and breed. They're all here and all quite irresistible. One of the sales people mentioned that the wonderfully 'weltschmerz' looking hound on the cover stops as much traffic as the rather amazingly decollete heroine on the jacket of a fiction best-seller a few counters away.

Chinese Reds Asked To U. N. Korea Debate

the spot to clear up anxieties or grievances about the Manchurian-Korean frontier.

The French and Indian delegations were busy behind the scenes today proposing that the new 14-nation peace observation commission be rushed to Korea as an impartial agency to discover the extent of Chinese Communist intervention. The merit of this, in French and Indian eyes, is that the Soviet Union and the other great powers have agreed to serve on this body, whereas the Russians still do not recognize the legality of the seven-nation Korean commission, on which only the small and medium-sized nations are represented.

The United States probably will go along with this suggestion, if the new 14-Nation group can be organized in time. Last June, when the North Koreans attacked the republic in the south, the United Nations had a seven-nation commission on the spot to attest to the aggression.

This time there is no such body on the Manchurian-Korean frontier, and the United States and its allies feel the lack of it is one of the factors that makes the present situation so dangerous. Certainly the Soviet Union made it plain today, through Jacob A. Malik, its Security Council spokesman, that it still challenged the legality of "the so-called unified command" under MacArthur and found MacArthur's charges of Chinese troop movements "unilateral, tendentious and not to be believed."

Austin, on the other hand, told the Council this morning, on the basis of MacArthur's reports, that the numbers of Chinese Communists in North Korea "have passed the 30,000 figure and continue to increase."

Behind the cautious manuvers of the American and Allied delegations today was a gnawing doubt over Chinese Communist intentions in Korea. Did the Chinese send their troops, or so-called "volunteers," because they were anxious about the power plants along the Yalu River? Or had they made a sinister deal with Moscow to send masses of men into Korea, so as to keep the United States pinned down in a never-ending war?

Delegates here simply did not know the answer; they had some basis for believing the blacker of these two interpretations, and for fearing the "general war" that Austin mentioned today. But they preferred to assume, for the present, that the Chinese were moving into Korea in a mistaken fear of being attacked.

Austin's main statement today was based on this assumption. It repeated every previous assurance given to the Chinese; it argued that the only purpose of the U.N. was "to repel North Korean Communist aggression and to reestablish international peace and security in the area."

Can't Ignore Evidence

"How often must a simple truth be reiterated before it penetrates?" he asked. "What campaign of misrepresentation is being directed at the authorities in Peiping which makes it so difficult for them to know what the rest of the world understands so well? Do they not want to listen or to understand the solemn statements of United Nations purpose and the renunciation of any special United States interests?"

Austin declared tht the Security Council, while reassuring Peiping, could not afford to ignore the mounting evidence of Chinese intervention.

"The point of the spear is in Korea," he said, "but the hands which hold the shaft are in Manchuria. The point of the spear must be withdrawn—this Council is the guardian of international peace and security, and must require the Chinese Communist regime to withdraw its forces from Korea and to refrain from further unlawful assistance, direct or indirect, to the North Korean aggressor."

As soon as the Council had decided to consider MacArthur's report, Malik suggested inviting the Chinese Communists to take part in a discussion of the entire "Korean question." This would have reopened the Council's historic decisions of last June. He was voted down, and the Council approved instead the British proposal to invite the Chinese only for the discussion of MacArthur's report.

Malik Hits At U. S.

But Malik did not let this happen without further sallies at the United States, especially at Austin's reference to the invitation as a "summons." Malik said it was time for the United States to remember that one did not speak in terms of "summons" to a sovereign state like China.

American "ruling circles" have set themselves up as rulers of the world and presume to dictate to everyone, he said, but the people who have tasted the sweets of liberty and independence will reject such language. At this a titter ran through the crowded Council chamber, and Ales Bebler of Yugoslavia, representing the Kremlin's Titoist enemy, let the giggles go on without banging his chairman's gavel.

It was not clear whether Malik and his government really wanted the Chinese delegation to appear here. But the Americans and their allies wanted them in a hurry, although only a few weeks ago they bitterly opposed a similar hearing for the Chinese Communists on the Formosa question.

The stakes are so high in Korea, and the dangers so frightening, that the Americans and their friends are clutching at almost any straw in an effort to prevent full-fledged Chinese intervention. One such straw will be the presence of Chinese Communists here, where the delegates of the Western world can talk to them and try to persuade them.

to Administration foreign policy methods gained profoundly.

The defeat of Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) by Everett M. Dirksen, running on an isolationist platform, the defeat of Mrs. Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.) by Representative Nixon, and of Senator Thomas (D., Utah), an invariable Administration supporter, all reduced sure Administration votes on foreign affairs.

Similarly, the thumping victory of Taft (R., Ohio) himself, and the substantial margins by which Republicans Wiley (Wis.), Hickenlooper (Iowa), Capehart (Ind.) and Millikin (Colo.) were reelected, serve to bolster by a high degree the position of the so-called Taft-Wherry-Bridges bloc in foreign policy matters.

Tydings Defeat Indicative

Perhaps most indicative of all in this respect was the defeat of Senator Tydings (D., Md.), in good part on the grounds that he whitewashed charges by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) of a pro-Communist attitude and infiltration in the State Department.

The general Washington expectation, therefore, was that Administration proposals in foreign affairs would find rough sledding in Congress. It seemed apparent that economic aid of the Marshall Plan and Point Four variety, and possibly also foreign military aid, would be much more difficult to maintain.

Also, it was felt that any Administration attempt to "Tito-ize" the Chinese Communists and weaken their ties with Russia by offering them a modus vivendi with the United States would be even more bitterly fought than heretofore.

The demand for Acheson's resignation, repeated as a warcry throughout the congressional campaigns, was reasserted yesterday morning by Harold E. Stassen, Republican presidential aspirant.

The Democratic losses are to be interpreted as "a vote of no confidence" for Acheson, he said. He told reporters that he "would assume that Acheson would resign in view of the election returns."

Several Senate Republicans throughout the country echoed those sentiments with much vigor yesterday.

Bonn to Offer Troops To West If Asked

BONN, Nov. 8 (AP).—The West German government went on record today as being willing to provide soldiers for the defense of West Europe if it is asked to do so.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer told Parliament this was the government's policy, deemed necessary for protection of the country against Soviet Russia. No vote was taken.

He read a resolution, drawn up by the cabinet, stating that West Germany must be prepared, with two conditions, to contribute to the West's defensive front.

The conditions were outlined in the statement:

"Germany's absolute equality in this defensive front with the other nations and the guarantee that this front will be strong enough to make impossible any Soviet aggression."

Communists and Socialists spoke in opposition.

Adenauer said West Germany is ready to cooperate with France on Premier Rene Pleven's plan for eventual formation of a unified European army with German units, but "the government is of the opinion that the present international tension needs quicker settlement."

Adenauer reported he had received a message from Pleven assuring him the German contingent in a unified army would have equality with the troops of other nations.

"We note this with satisfaction and gratitude," he said.

The Pleven plan provides that German troops be dispersed in small units among the forces of other nations. Diplomatic informants in London have reported the United States backs a counterplan for use of 10 divisions of Germans in divisional strength.

Adenauer's stand was in line with American desires for less talk and more action in the rearming of west Europe. His conservative government, with a majority in Parliament, apparently does not intend to ask for a vote at this session.

East Zone Parliament Names Grotewohl Again

BERLIN, Nov. 8 (AP).—Communist Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl was chosen unanimously by the new Soviet zone Parliament to head East Germany's government for the next four years.

The Parliament was chosen in a one-ticket election October 15. Grotewohl's new cabinet will be presented to Parliament for indorsement November 15.

Atom Expert

Leftist Briton May Get Nobel Prize

PROF. CECIL F. POWELL
. . . physicist

LONDON, Nov. 8 (AP).—Prof. Cecil F. Powell, leftist atom and cosmic ray expert, was reliably reported today to be in line for the Nobel Prize for physics.

The 46-year-old scientist is a vice president of the British Peace Committee, sponsor of the Communist-inspired World Peace Congress next week in Sheffield.

Announcement of the Nobel prizes will be made Friday in Stockholm.

Powell last year won the medal of the British Royal Society for inventing a technique for photographing atoms at the moment of splitting. He is credited also with discovering several types of mesons, particles of matter lighter than the lightest of atoms.

"I am not a Communist and I have no political affiliations whatever," Powell said today. "But I believe everything possible should be done to bring peace to the world."

He said he did not plan to attend the Sheffield Peace Congress "because I haven't got the time."

Britain's last winner of the Nobel Prize for physics was Prof. P. M. S. Blackett, who has made no secret of his sympathies for Russia.

(In Havana, a Mexican delegation en route to the Peace Congress in Sheffield, was granted permission to continue its trip after spending a night in jail.

(The 11 Mexicans included labor leader Vicente Lombardo Toledano. They were among 157 Communists and Communist sympathizers arrested last night on charges of disturbing the peace. All were released today and ordered to appear for trial, but the order as far as it affected the Mexicans was countermanded by Foreign Minister Ernesto Dihigo.

(Among those arrested was Gen. Heriberto Jara, former Mexican Ambassador to the United States and former Navy Minister.)

[The New York Herald Tribune reported that Pablo Picasso, Spanish painter, and Ilya Ehrenburg, Russian writer, have been refused permission by the Labor Government to enter Britain to attend the Peace Congress. Jean Joliot-Curie, top French atomic scientist, also has been barred.

British Labor Loses Vote, Keeps Power

LONDON, Nov. 8 (AP). — The Labor government took a beating in the House of Commons tonight, but it doesn't mean a new election.

The setback came on an opposition motion to allow more opportunity for "back-benchers" (members of junior rank) to introduce legislation without official party sponsorship.

Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison spoke against the measure. On a vote, however, the bill was carried by 235 to 229, apparently with the aid of some Laborites.

Because the issue was not a question of confidence in the government, it did not endanger the Labor Party's rule.

Labor Party leaders said no attempt would be made to reverse the decision.

British Expert On Cosmic Ray Says He's Red

LONDON, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Britain's atomic energy chief discovered today that a member of the Manchester University cosmic ray team is an avowed Communist.

Peter Astbury, 34, who is engaged in research on cosmic rays, returned from Budapest, Hungary, with an admission that he is a Communist.

Observers said the revelation probably will bring a radical revision of the present "kid gloves" techniques used by British security officials.

They said this was especially true because British officials still are upset by the revelations in Dr. Klaus Fuchs spy case and the disappearance into Russia of British atomic scientist Bruno Pontecorvo.

Fuchs, who admitted he had given atomic secrets to Russia, was sent to prison. Pontecorvo continued on to Russia while on a trip to Scandinavia.

Some British officials are afraid the present flow of atomic secrets from the United States may be slowed further or stopped altogether unless better protection is guaranteed by the British.

N. Y. Pair in Spy Case To Go on Trial Friday

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Abraham Brothman and Miriam Moskowitz, charged with obstructing justice in the investigation of the Klaus Fuchs-Harry Gold atom spy ring, were remanded to prison today pending opening of their Federal Court trial Friday.

Bail of $25,000 each, on which the pair had been free since their indictment last summer, was revoked by Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman on application of United States Attorney Irving Saypol.

Confessed spy Harry Gold is expected to be a key witness and may detail, for the first time publicly, his own secret stealings in the international Soviet espionage ring.

Nepal Restricts Admission of Indians, Suspends Air Service

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 8 (AP).—Nepal has suspended the infant Calcutta-Katmandu air service and ordered the entry of Indians restricted as an aftermath of refugee King Tribhuvana Bir Kikram's flight to the Indian Embassy in Katmandu, usually reliable sources said tonight.

[The Prime Minister of Nepal has smashed a revolt of army officers loyal to the King reports received in official quarters said, the United Press reported.

[The Maharaja Mohun Shamsher Jan Bahadur Rama, the Premier, had the leaders of the revolt disarmed and arrested, the advices said.]

A spokesman for the Indian government said India is "granting facilities" for the royal refugee to get out of his restive Himalayan state. He did not go into detail about how it will be accomplished. Aside from the air service, launched only six weeks ago, travel between Katmandu and India normally is confined to a packtrain trail.

The King, whose advocacy of a more democratic rule drew the wrath of his ministers, fled to the Indian Embassy in his capital.

Nepal's embassy here announced last night that the government, controlled by Prime Minister Maharaja Mohun Shamsher Jang Bahadur Rana, had seated a 3-year-old grandson of the King, Prince Gyanendra, on "the vacant throne."

Nepal forms a buffer between part of India and Tibet, the priest-ruled "roof of the world" that Chinese Communist troops are invading.

Reports came today from the Indian-Tibetan frontier town of Kalimpong that the Chinese vanguard was only 40 miles from Lhasa, the Tibetan capital. Official sources in New Delhi, however, dismissed these as trade-route rumors. India's envoy at Lhasa reported last Sunday that the main Chinese force had paused at Chamdo, 350 miles from the capital, to regroup.

September Sales Taxes Soar Over Last Year

The District sales tax brought in $1,252,847 on September sales, an increase of $172,000 or 16 percent over the same period last year.

Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke attributed the increase chiefly to the addition of merchants to the sales tax rolls and the higher current prices.

School Rules Hit Catholic Institutions

Catholic schools cannot qualify under new accrediting standards of the Middle Atlantic Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges and probably will withdraw from that organization unless the standards are changed.

This was brought out in discussion yesterday as 125 Catholic school superintendents opened a two-day conference at the Mayflower Hotel.

The annual meeting of the National Catholic Education Association's department of superintendents showed a growing dissatisfaction among school officials with accrediting proceedures.

The Very Rev. Vincent J. Flynn, president of the College of St. Thomas at St. Paul, Minn., said that too many organizations are accrediting schools.

While some associations have done a good job, many educators now feel that standards have become "arbitrary" and accreditation has become a "nuisance." He said the problem is not limited to Catholic schools.

The educators pointed out, however, that Catholic schools are affected directly by the change of Standards of the Middle Atlantic Association. They described the new standards as "pagan" and said no Catholic school properly can qualify. Previously there was more latitude which took into account Catholic philosophy, they said.

Edward W. Barrett, Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, delivered an "off-the-record" speech at a luncheon session. He spoke on "Telling Our Foreign Policy Through the Voice of America."

In the afternoon, delegates attended group meetings on life adjustment education, school buildings and standards, teacher training, administration and supervision.

The work groups will meet again today at 9:30 a. m. Reports will be adopted and officers elected at a general session at 2 p. m.

Senate Crime Group Meets With Distillers

By the United Press

Chairman Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee yesterday said the Nation's largest distillers have promised to cooperate in "eliminating certain gangster elements that have infiltrated the wholesale liquor field."

He made the announcement after a closed-door meeting between his committee, leading distillers and officials of the Treasury Department's alcohol tax unit.

Kefauver said the distillers set up an industry committee to work out a program of "getting rid of hoodlums" in wholesale distributorships. They promised to submit their recommendations by December 1.

The recommendations may call for some changes in present Federal and State laws, he said, since the distillers feel they may not have a legal right to "refuse wholesalers who are licensed by various States."

Kefauver said the distilling industry has not previously "taken the responsibility it should" to clean house among its wholesalers. He added, however, that the committee is "very well pleased" with the attitude displayed at yesterday's meeting.

He said the committee will continue its own study of gangsterism in the liquor business, with special attention to the production and distribution of bootleg "moonshine"—a reputed billion-dollar-a-year business.

Liquor makers present for the first meeting were President Arthur D. Schulte of Park & Tilford; Vice President John L. Leban of Schenley Corp.; Ross Corbit, president of Hiram Walker & Sons, Inc.; and President Russell R. Brown of American Distilling Corp.

Also there were Assistant Deputy Commissioners John L. Huntington, Dwight E. Avis and Carroll M. Mealey of the Treasury's alcohol tax unit, and James C. Evans, Tennessee Commissioner of Finance and Taxation.

Indicted Ex-Student Held Insane in Report

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 8 (U.P.)—Theodore A. Trent-Lyon, former divinity student indicted for murder in the killing of a noted Yale psychiatrist, was found insane today by three court-appointed physchiatrists.

The unanimous opinion, filed with Superior Court Judge Thomas J. Molloy, stated Trent-Lyon suffered from a "mental disease called schizophrenic paranoid type of severe degree, and he is, in our opinion, psychotic." However, the sanity commission added, "Trent-Lyon is capable of understanding the nature of the proceedings against him."

Judge Molloy set Thursday, November 16, as a hearing date.

Kiwanis Club to Honor U. N. Armed Forces

Tribute to United Nations armed forces now fighting in Korea will be given at an Armistice Day luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Washington at 12:30 p.m. today at the Mayflower Hotel.

Guest of honor will be Second Lieut. Trevor W. Swett, jr., Infantry, who was wounded at Haman, Korea, in August, and who is now a patient at the Army Medical Center. Lieutenant Swett, a graduate of West Point in 1949, is the son of Col. and Mrs. Trevor W. Swett, sr., of 4402 Stanford st., Chevy Chase, Md. Col. Frederick B. Wiener, USAR, local attorney, will speak on the functions of the Army Reserve.

One On the Aisle

Granger Does Well In a Taxing Role

By Richard L. Coe

AFTER READING Leo Brady's "Edge of Doom," I was no little astonished that Sam Goldwyn decided to make a picture out of it. For in this novel about a twisted young man who murders an elderly priest, the interest lay largely in the lad's thoughts and frenzied conscience. And because Goldwyn habitually stays away from grim, realistic settings, his choice seemed even stranger.

The picture, which has had considerable revision since its New York premiere last August, has now arrived at Keith's, where its virtues are its unusual story and an able performance by Farley Granger.

However, it also strikes me as a muddled picture and I am as much at a loss in the film as I was with the book to decide whether this is a study in futility or in faith. On the first count it is depressing, a quality I do not condemn; on the second, while it may bespeak a personal emptiness, I must confess I was not convinced.

We first meet 20-year-old Martin Lynn as his mother lies dying. Poverty has been their lot and the boy's father was a suicide, which precluded his being buried in consecrated ground, a fact that has made his widow's life miserable and his son's soul hateful of the church.

When the mother dies, Martin goes to the old parish priest who had refused absolution to the father. The boy seeks to make up to his mother for her lifelong poverty by arranging an impressive funeral, for which neither he nor the priest has the money. In a fit of fury, Martin kills the priest with a crucifix.

The rest of the picture is devoted to Martin's efforts to escape both the physical and moral consequences of his deed. By chance, a holdup had been committed about the same hour and the boy becomes innocently involved. Through an erroneous witness, the man who pulled the holdup is identified as the priest's likely murderer.

But the old priest's young assistant has come upon irrefutable evidence that Martin must have done the murder in a fit of rage, realizing which, and haunted by his conscience, Martin gives himself up.

Philip Yordan did the initial screen adaptation, to which Ben Hecht has added a flashback frame and a few pieces of commentary to explain the lad's thoughts.

This frame gives you Dana Andrews, the young priest, explaining to an assistant dissatisfied with the misery of the parish how the youthful murderer's final act of conscience has served as a great lesson to him. The point seems to be that the young man's consciousness of his inner faith is inspiring.

Was it Faith or Fear

This I question, because it is made clear again and again that the youth knows he is clearly under suspicion. Would he have reacted in the same way if he seemed completely clear of all suspicion? He senses that the detective is on to his secret and he knows, from a look, that the young priest is. So how is his surrender an act of simple faith?

As I did with the book, I prefer to look on "Edge of Doom" as a study of the horrors of poverty, the poverty Shaw dramatized so often. This also makes plausible the introduction of the inevitable young love theme between Granger and Mala Powers, although it pletely changes the psychological suggestions of the original character, a neurotic.

Since the reasoning about the important characters and faith seems woolly and incapable of careful analysis, it is perhaps best to take "Edge of Doom" simply as an engrossing melodrama. Granger, it seems to me, probes with good intensity into the boy's character and I can think of no other young actor who could do so well with the role. A taut, sensitive performer, Granger is surely the most valuable of Goldwyn's rich properties.

The direction is by Mark Robson, who made "Champion" and "Home of the Brave," and while it's in realistic style, there's a strange velvety gauze before his cameras.

TONIGHT brings searchlights, an honor guard and the Army Band to the Warner, where a special showing of "Breakthrough" will be attended by top Defense brass. . . . This is a story of the landing at Normandy and the battle of the hedgerows through the push to St. Lo. . . . While invitations have been issued for the special guests, the public can buy its way in. . . . The Army Band will be playing from the stage from 8:15, especial ceremonies will be held at 9, the picture going on shortly after.

"EDGE OF DOOM." RKO-Radio release produced by Sam Goldwyn. Screen play by Philip Yordan from the novel by Leo Brady. Additional writing by Ben Hecht. Photographed by Harry Stradling. Music by Hugo Friedhofer. Directed by Mark Robson. At Keith's.

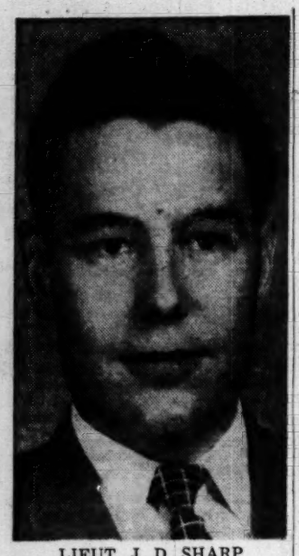
Lieut. Sharp Killed In Action in Korea



LIEUT. J. D. SHARP
. . . killed in action

First Lieut. J. D. Sharp of the Marine Corps Reserve, an attorney with the Federal Trade Commission's anti-monopoly bureau, has been listed as killed in action in Korea.

Lieutenant Sharp, 30, who lived at 2220 39th pl. nw., was a veteran of the Guadalcanal and Munda campaingns in World War II.

A member of the District bar, he had been an attorney with the Federal Trade Commission since December, 1948. The first member of the commission staff to be called to military service in the Korean war, he returned to active duty last July 31.

Prior to his service with the FTC, Lieutenant Sharp was employed in the law office of Carson Gray Frailey in the Albee Building here while attending George Washington University School of Law. He received his law degree there in 1948. He was unmarried and formerly lived at 1301 Ridge pl. se.

A native of Osborne, Kans., he was graduated from Fort Hays Kansas State College in Hays, Kans., in 1941. He enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1942 and served in the Pacific for 18 months.

In 1944, he attended Officers Candidate School, Reserve Officers School and an instructors' orientation course. He was the top man in his OCS class. He went on inactive duty in 1946 as a second lieutenant.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Sharp of Forest Grove, Oreg.

1288 Koreans Found Slain In Coal Fields

WITH THE U. S. FIRST CORPS IN KOREA, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—American officers found evidence today that 1288 political prisoners forced to work in the coal mines of North Korea as slave laborers had been shot by rifle fire.

Col. Burton F. Ellis, First Corps judge advocate, said the bodies of 700 victims were found at an Anju coal mine and four survivors said they were killed October 14.

Ellis said the Communist mine chief suspected of having taken part in the mass murders was held for possible trial as a war criminal. The bodies of 408 political prisoners were found in a 20-foot-deep air raid shelter at a coal mine near Chaidong.

Maj. Paul A. Robblee of Bricelyn, Minn., said he found the bodies of 200 prisoners in each of two large bomb shelters and eight more in a smaller one. All 408 were killed by rifles

The bodies of 180 other South Koreans were found in a tunnel of a coal mine near Yongbyon. Two survivors said 20 guards killed the prisoners with rifles on orders of the mine chief. Civilians said they knew of no American prisoners there.

Tied to Tree and Shot By Reds, Officer Says

An American officer captured by the North Koreans told yesterday of being tied to a tree, shot and left for dead.

Lieut. Henry J. McNichols, jr., of St. Louis, Mo., related the experience at the regular briefing of Pentagon reporters. He had been brought here by the Army from the Fort Sam Houston, Tex., hospital.

McNichols was captured by the North Koreans near Waegwan September 10 and held prisoner for 10 days before he was rescued. He said the Korean Communists forced him to read over the radio a statement saying the conflict in Korea was an imperialistic war and asking the American troops:

"Why aren't you at home with your loved ones?"

Ships Collide; 4 Dead, 4 Hurt

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Two Navy destroyers collided before dawn 400 miles east of Wilmington, N. C., today and the Navy reported four sailors dead and four injured, three critically.

The destroyers in calm seas under normal weather conditions when they crashed, suffered heavy damage to hulls and below-deck quarters, but stayed afloat. Names of casualties were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Two tugs were sent to bring the battered USS Roan and USS Brownson into port. All casualties were aboard the Roan. Medical officers here were checking to learn if the injured might be removed by helicopter.

The vessels were attached to Destroyer Squadron 10 at Newport, R. I. The Brownson, flagship of Capt. H. E. Heneberger, was commanded by Comdr. E. B. Henry. Comdr. D. L. Martineau is skipper of the Roan. Officers said the ships were engaged in Atlantic Fleet operations with Division 101.

Atlantic Fleet headquarters said the accident occurred while all the ships were darkened. The Brownson bore down on the Roan, struck on the right-rear quarter and slammed its bow into the Roan's after engine room.

Pvt. Simpson Wins Medal In Korea War

Army Pvt. Earl L. Simpson, who began an amateur boxing career at the Southeast Washington Boys Club at the age of 8, has been awarded a Bronze Star Medal with "V" for valor in Korean fighting.

Pvt. Simpson, who won several championships as a youth at the Southeast Boys Club, held the Silver Gloves boxing award for two years and a Golden Gloves award for one year prior to enlisting in the Army in September, 1949. His home is at 327 18th pl. ne.

His father, Edward Simpson, a mechanic with the Christian Heurich Brewing Co. here, said his son had boxed while stationed at Fort Knox and in Japan.

A Tokyo dispatch also lists First Lieut. Harry T. Sandlin, 25, of 2480 16th st. nw., as having received a third Oak Leaf Cluster to th Air Medal in Korea. Lieutenant Sandlin was not known at that address and his present home address could not be learned yesterday.

Frigates, Back From Russia, Serve in Korea

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Thirteen American frigates, lend-leased to Russia during World War II and returned during the past year, have been doing yeoman service against the Communists in and near Korean waters, it was disclosed yesterday.

The 1200-ton warships are normally employed on escort duty and have been useful protecting convoys, a ranking official said. They were turned back to United States possession in Japan in October and November of 1949.

During World War II, 28 frigates were lent to Russia. The Soviets returned 27, saying one was sunk.

Two of the small war vessels, the Rockford and Muskogee, were turned over to the Korean navy, 11 were commissioned by the United States Navy, with two more scheduled for commissioning; six were "cannibalized" for spare parts and the fate of the remaining six is still undetermined.

Three of the refitted frigates—the Evansville, Bayonne and Newport—were identified as participating in the Inchon landing in Korea.

When delivered by Russia at the Yokosuka naval base in Japan, the frigates were in fairly good material condition, but had almost no spare parts aboard. The "cannibalizing" of the six helped meet this need.

Even then emergency measures were necessary to fit the ships for sea. Superchargers for the main engines were lacking, and a hurried radio plea to Washington brought back word there were none in stock, and the company that made them in wartime was out of business.

Japanese craftsmanship and copying ability then was called into play. Jap workers soon had exact replicas—even to the same serial numbers—ready, at one-third the original cost.

Frigates—named for light warships of a century ago—are classed as patrol gunboats on the Navy list. Individual craft were christened after small cities. They mount 3-inch guns, smaller caliber antiaircraft weapons and carry depth charges.

Navy plans call for turning some of them over to the Japanese for coastal protection if a peace treaty is signed.

Gen. 'Ike' May Be In Europe 'Soon,' He Tells Reporters

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 8 (AP). General Eisenhower, who has been much talked of for commander of Western European defense forces, said here today he "could easily be in Europe soon."

"For whatever military duty there may be in store for me," Eisenhower added as he started a four-day Texas tour.

Later he supplemented this to say he had "no positive word" concerning any possible future duties.

The General's comments came in a news conference, and in statements made later.

He said he couldn't comment on the role Western Germany should play in the program for the defense of western Europe.

"It might be my job to get all these people to work together," Eisenhower said.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 8 (AP).—Grains took a beating in a couple of heavy selling waves on the Board of Trade today.

One selling wave came at the start, knocking soybeans down as much as 10 cents. After that the market lifted itself off its feet and stayed grossly above its lows until the last half hour. Then another burst of selling flattened prices again.

Wheat wound up 1⅞-2⅞ lower, corn 3¾-5¼ lower, oats 1⅜-3⅛ lower, rye 4⅜-5½ lower, soybeans 9¼ to 10 cents lower and lard 12 to 50 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Brokers attributed the drop to a variety of reasons—profit-taking after a steady advance for the past several weeks, a recovery from the war jitters experienced Monday, a belief that the election might result in a "less inflationary" national government and routine grain items which were bearish.

Maryland P-T A Opens Annual Conference Today

BALTIMORE, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers will open its thirty-fifth annual convention here Thursday and the theme of the two-day meeting will be "Preparing Today's Child for Tomorrow's World."

Giving the keynote address will be Mrs. Clifford N. Jenkins, vice president of Region 1 of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Other speakers will include Mrs. Harold Walker, daughter of P-TA founder Alice McLellan Birney; Mrs. Marion L. Faegre, of the United States Children's Bureau; Mrs. Stanley G. Cook, legislation chairman of the Maryland group and Dr. Earle Hawkins, president of Towson State Teachers College.

President of the Maryland congress is Mrs. Emil Smith of Silver Spring.

Puerto Rican Senate Decries Nationalists

SAN JUAN, P. R., Nov. 8 (U.P.)—A resolution expressing the "joy of the people of Puerto Rico" that both President Truman and Gov. Luis Munoz Marin escaped unharmed from Nationalist assassins last week was approved unanimously by the Puerto Rican Senate today and sent to the House.

It was expected to be approved by the House later tonight.

Violence and teachings of the Puerto Rican Nationalists are repudiated in the resolution as "alien to Puerto Rican life and contrary to what Puerto Ricans love, sustain and respect."

Needy people will be deprived of aid unless you help the 1951 Community Chest Campaign reach its goal. Give today.

only Spanish to each other during the seven-minute ride.

"The only word I could pick up was 'Truman'," Gavounas said. "They acted very gentlemanly." He said he was paid 50 cents, which included a 10-cent tip.

Saw Picture in The Post

Gavounas said he did not hear of the shooting until 3:15 that Wednesday afternoon, and did not realize that his passengers were involved until he saw a picture of Collazo in The Washington Post two days later.

First witness to testify at the three-hour session of the grand jury was Harold P. Ganss, 48, an attorney and a long-time friend of Private and Mrs. Coffelt.

Ganss identified Coffelt's body both at Emergency Hospital and at the District Morgue. Mrs. Coffelt has been living with Mr. and Mrs. Ganss at 6409 33d st., nw., since the death of her husband.

Deputy Coroner Dr. Christopher J. Murphy testified as to the cause of Coffelt's death: profuse hemorrhage and shock as the result of gun wounds. He said three bullets were taken from Coffelt's body, all from the same gun.

Mum on Bullet Source

Neither the police nor the prosecutors, U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay and his assistant, John W. Fihelly, will state from whose gun the bullets were fired.

But from the position of the two bodies, police are virtually certain that Coffelt was killed by Torresola and Torresola by Coffelt.

Dr. Murphy performed the autopsy on Coffelt's body late Wednesday night and Thursday morning. He said all three bullets entered the abdomen.

A hitherto unidentified eyewitness who watched the gun-battle from a second floor window in his office across Pennsylvania ave., gave the grand jurors his version of the attempted assassination.

He is Matthew J. Cullen, 1757 Church st., nw., a staff assistant to the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, which is housed in the old State Department building opposite Blair House.

Was Standing at Window

Cullen said he was standing at his window when the firing started. He said he watched Torresola shooting, then saw Coffelt and Pvt. Joseph H. Downs, 44, fall, wounded. Downs is recovering from bullet wounds in his head, chest and abdomen.

Cullen said his view of Collazo was obscured.

White House Police Pvt. Edward Tehaan, an eye-witness.

Emergency Hospital Dr. Robert Ryan, who treated the wounded;

Emergency Hospital Dr. Eulaine Naiden, who answered the ambulance call turned in by eye-witness Marion R. Preston, A Metropolitan policeman pounding his beat at 17th and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Dr. Benjamin Franklin Dean, jr., a Police surgeon, who operated on Coffelt in a vain attempt to save his life at Emergency Hospital;

Hotel Room Clerk

Frank Fletcher, room clerk at the Harris Hotel, 17 Massachusetts ave. nw., where Collazo and Torresola registered the night before the shooting;

Christian Dirks, a businessman living at the Claridge Hotel, 820 Connecticut ave. nw., an eye-witness;

White House Police Pvt. Joseph O. Davidson, an eye-witness who took part in the shooting, according to police;

And Special Agent of the Secret Service Floyd Boring, another eye-witness in on the firing.

Both Boring and Davidon fired at Collazo, according to police.

The pistols used by the revolutionaries, a P-38 and a Luger, were shown to the jurors.

Eleven more witnesses were scheduled to testify this morning, including the Secret Service agents who have grilled Collazo. Fay said he hoped that presentation of the case could be completed during the day.

Even if Government ballistic experts prove that Torresola, not Collazo, murdered Coffelt, Collazo could still be indicted for first-degree murder. Under the law, when death occurs during the commission of a felony, the person committing the felony is guilty of first degree murder.

New York Hearing

Fifteen relatives and acquaintances of the two would-be assassins were called before a grand jury in New York yesterday and then excused without being questioned.

They were given subpenas to return at an undisclosed time for questioning. U. S. Attorney Irving H. Saypol said he was delaying the questioning of the 15 because of the Washington grand jury investigation. He would not say whether the New York witnesses would be called before the Washington grand jury.

NU-NAP Service Removes the Shine, Revives the Nap of Most Fabrics!

YOUR SUIT, COAT, UNIFORM or other apparel—men's or women's—can now have the shine removed and the nap revived by the amazing NU-NAP Process. NU-NAP brings back the nap which still remains, even though pressings and wear have made the nap seem to "disappear." NU-NAP has successfully treated such fabrics as serges, gabardines, tweeds, fleecy materials—even crushed velvets (where the pile is not actually damaged).

NU-NAP Treatment for suits, overcoats, dresses, including a quality cleaning and pressing 7.50

NU-NAP Treatment for items like skirts and jackets, including cleaning and pressing 3.75

Members of House in 82d Congress, Elected Tuesday, to Take Office in January

By The Associated Press

Total membership of 435 to be elected, including 3 Republicans elected in Maine September 11. Necessary for majority 218.

Political classification of each State delegation as at present constituted in the 81st Congress is indicated after State name, and of each district, by abbreviation. If two or more names appear for a single district, the race is still undecided. If a single name appears for a district that person has been elected.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Blue Plate Special:

FRANK FILCHOCK is coming back to the National Football League, and high time. They tossed him out in 1946 for failing to report a bribe offer, but that was only a sin of omission and they threw the book at him merely for violating a house rule. Filchock's friends always did maintain that he got the works for, as they say, not accepting a bribe.

It's the Baltimore Colts who are inviting Filchock back in the league and thus earning his gratitude. He won reinstatement last summer, but the stigma would not be completely eradicated until he was actually back in a league uniform. Under the circumstances, the Colts can contemplate that Filchock will play his head off, if necessary, in their behalf.

Povich

The wonder is that the Redskins didn't latch on to Filchock, at a time when they are moaning about their own injured quarterbacks. He's 33, of course, but younger than Sammy Baugh, and he always was more rugged. And coming out of that Canadian football league, he's already in physical shape.

Filchock was with the Redskins in the era when Baugh was the royal Nonesuch among quarterbacks. Yet there was always a segment of Redskin fans who preferred to watch Filchock run the team and, unlike Baugh, run the ball from the quarterback. Among those fans was Filchock himself, who used to say, "Baugh's great, but I'm good, too."

CHARLEY JUSTICE may have tossed away the Redskins' game at the Polo Grounds last Sunday when he fluffed that lateral pass which set up the Giants' winning field goal, but he still can do no wrong in the view of his native North Carolina publications.

The Daily Tar Heel, the student publication which used to put out Charley Justice editions during the four years he was making North Carolina U famous, has mustered a few nice paragraphs about Justice despite the dispatches in the Yankee newspapers which labeled him the goat of the game.

Says the Daily Tar Heel: "Justice continued his fine offensive work throughout the game and sparked several Washington drives —but the Redskins lost. A number of newspapermen jumped all over Charley for his last play of the day. On that one, Justice took a lateral from Hugh Taylor and tried to toss the ball out of bounds to stop the clock.

"As luck would have it, a Giant back charged in to intercept the attempt and Ray Poole booted a field goal as the final gun sounded to give the Giants a 3-point victory.

"Justice's boner was at least an honest one. Those made by the other Redskins were the result of dumb play analysis, or just plain lack of thought." So there!

OUT AT MARYLAND University, President H. C. Byrd and Head Coach Jim Tatum must have winced more than a trifle when the State's election returns showed that two of the Terrapins' outstanding stars, Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., and Senator Millard Tydings, were thrown for a loss by their Republican opponents.

The Messrs. Lane and Tydings never did actually suit up for Tatum and Byrd but they carried the ball for Maryland U. in State politics, with particular effect in the appropriations department. They were both whopping Maryland fans, saw the Terrapins games, and Tydings had a son on the squad.

And so when President Byrd wanted to build his 50,000-seat stadium, the State money was forthcoming, and when Tatum wanted to expand into big-time football, they got a big lift from Lane and Tydings. It is well, perhaps, that the new stadium was completed and funds for the big field house already made available before the Governor and the Senator were unhorsed by the electorate. The next project of Tatum and Dr. Byrd is to make friends with the Messrs. McKeldin and Butler.

WHEN CLARK GRIFFITH hinted the other day that he is attempted to toss television out of his ball park, he said flatly, "there are too many television sets and they're hurting our attendance."

On the second count, the venerable president of the Nats could speak with authority. His fifth-place ball team had attracted nearly 100,000 fewer customers in 1950 than did his eighth-place club of the season before.

Well, along comes an announcement from a group that calls itself the Washington Television Circulation Committee, to bear out Griffith's complaint there are a lot, if not too many, TV sets. No fewer than 14,100 were installed in the city's homes during October, the WTVC reports, bringing the total to 188,585 in the metropolitan area.

When Griffith first sold the television rights to his home games three seasons ago, they were playing to an audience of only 1100 sets. That many, he didn't mind. Now he says, the TV people are over-doing it, but reminding them he can be appeased if somebody will buy his video-radio rights for $200,000.

Colts Bring Filchock Out Of 'Exile' After 4 Years

After a four-year exile for failure to report a bribe attempt, Frankie Filchock came back to the National Football League yesterday.

The 33-year-old former Redskin and New York Giants' quarterback was signed by the Baltimore Colts, whose president, Abe Watner, said "we wanted to give Frank a chance to play in this country again."

Filchock had been a player-coach with Montreal since his exile by NFL Commissioner Bert Bell for failure to report a bribe attempt before the championship playoff game between the Giants and Chicago Bears in 1946.

Commissioner Bert Bell of the NFL last July lifted the suspension on Filchock. But none of the teams moved to sign him and he went on playing in the Canadian League.

Canada's 'Man of Year'

Merle Hapes, a Giant teammate of Filchock's, was also banned. Filchock was permitted to play for the Giants against the Bears but Hapes wasn't. Play in the Canadian League ended recently and earlier this week Filchock approached Watner and asked for a chance with the Colts.

Montreal officials said their star, who was voted Canada's "Male athlete of the year in 1949," would return to Canada next season. Frank had no comment on this.

Filchock, who played collegiate football at Indiana, was purchased by the Redskins in 1938 from the Pittsburgh Steelers as an understudy to Sammy Baugh.

Frank performed for the locals for seven years, with time out for Naval service, and despite being on the same team with the great Baugh, Filchock led the National Football League in passing in 1941. He was also seventh in rushing that same year.

Starred in '45 Title Game

With Baugh injured, Filchock threw touchdown passes for the Redskins in the 15-14 game which Cleveland (then the Rams) won for the league title in 1945.

He was traded to the Giants for Tackle Paul Stern, now with the Chicago Bears, and Quarterback Tommy Mont, now an assistant Redskins' coach, in 1946.

News of the attempted bribe broke on the eve of the Giants-Bears playoff game. After a dramatic midnight session with New York Mayor O'Dwyer, Filchock and Hapes, Commissioner Bell announced the indefinite suspension of both stars.

That Bagarus Matter

Filchock, a year later, figured in the headlines again. Steve Bagarus, a Redskin teammate of his, married Filchock's wife after she had divorced Filchock.

"It's mighty good to be back," Filchock said yesterday.

The Colts play the Redskins here November 26.

The 198-pounder is primarily a quarterback, of which the Colts already have two in Y. A. Tittle and Adrian Burk. However, he also can play the other backfield positions.

Scolari Pulls Game Out of Fire; Also Is High Scorer

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Washington's Caps piled up a 20-point lead in the third quarter, but had to hold on for dear life in the face of a late Baltimore rally to win, 86-81, in a National Basketball Association game before 1655 fans last night at Uline Arena.

The Caps were on top 60-40 in the third quarter when 6-foot 7-inch rookie Don Rehfeldt from Wisconsin ignited the Bullets with his spectacular left-handed hook shots.

He poured in five points at the close of the third period to whittle Washington's lead to 65-51 and added 12 more in the last quarter. The Bullets trailed by only 72-68 with 3:40 left, and 79-75 with two minutes left.

But the Bullets couldn't quite make it. Freddie Scolari dropped in two free throws and a set shot to pull the Caps out of danger.

Scolari High Man With 24

Scolari wound up with 24 points, while Rehfeldt, Baltimore's No. 1 collegiate draft choice, made 23.

It was a bruising game which saw Baltimore's Norm Mager and Washington's Al Sawyer wave fists at each other in the first quarter and Baltimore's Walt Budko and Washington's Chuck Gilmur square off in the fourth. Hardly a blow was struck, however.

In the last second, the Caps' Tom O'Keefe was hit in the abdomen in a scramble under the basket, and carried off the floor. He recovered in the dressing room.

Baltimore was in the lead only briefly in the early moments. A layup by Scolari, at the four-minute mark put Washington ahead, 6-5, to stay.

At the quarter, it was 21-17. The Bullets, unable, to break inside the Washington defense, and missing Paul Hoffman, their charging forward who is in the midst of a salary dispute, lagged behind 47-35 at halftime.

The Bullets went scoreless for the first five minutes of the third period as Washington piled up a 60-40 lead. Then Baltimore started its comeback.

Caps Cool Off

Rookie Rehfeldt began clicking with his hook and Joe Dohlon and Byrnes were helping. Going into the fourth quarter, it was Washington, 65-51, and Baltimore was still coming.

Washington's guns suddenly went silent, and for the first seven minutes in the fourth quarter, the Caps failed to pot a field goal. A set shot by Budko cut the Caps' lead to 72-68, before Tom O'Keefe ended the Washington famine with a layup.

On four straight points by Scolari, Washington pulled out to 79-70, but Rehfeldt and Co. wouldn't give in. Rehfeldt put in three points and Dick Mehen a foul to cut Baltimore's deficit to 79-75, with 1:12 left. But that was Baltimore's last gasp.

Manager of Year

Phils' Sawyer Finally Bests Casey Stengel

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8 (AP).—Little did Eddie Sawyer think two years ago that he would be baseball's manager of the year in 1950.

"It was farthest from my thoughts," said the affable manager of the Philadelphia Phillies today on being informed he had been named to that honor in the Associated Press' annual Nationwide poll of sports writers and sportscasters.

"I knew we had a coming ball club, even though we finished a bad sixth in 1948," he said, "but as to myself being selected as the No. 1 manager after so brief a period in major league baseball—well, I just never gave it a thought."

Sawyer, the balding former college professor, edged out his World Series conqueror, Casey Stengel of the world champion New York Yankees. The manager of the National League champs was named on 164 of the 381 ballots. Stengel, who won the honor last year, received 134 votes to finish a close second.

Four other managers received recognition. Robert (Red) Rolfe, who did a great job in directing the Detroit Tigers to second place in the American League, was third with 51 votes. Leo Durocher polled 23 for his feat of piloting the New York Giants to third position in the National circuit. Steve O'Neill of the Boston Red Sox received five and Bucky Harris of the Washington Senators, four.

"If the draft doesn't cut too big a hole, we should be right in there from the start next year," he said.

More Players May Be Barred By Arkansas

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Nov. 8. Coach Otis Douglas, who kicked two star linemen off the University of Arkansas football team for skipping classes, indicated today that other dismissals may follow.

Douglas, seeking to build up a spirit in a disappointing Razorback team which has slumped to five defeats in seven games, said:

"There have been several players whose attitudes are having ill effects on the entire squad. We have been fighting this thing all along. Much of the blame for any team's poor morale can be found in poor school work."

Tackle Fred Williams and Center-Tackle Bob Griffin, both juniors and first-stringers, were told yesterday to check in their uniforms.

"It was a case of direct disobedience," Douglas said today. "We have talked at length with both men and for some time we have urged them to meet their classroom obligations.

"There are some of the others, too, who have been doing the same thing. But they have covered up well enough so far that we haven't definite evidence.

"Any time you find a boy who doesn't take an interest in all his college life, you find one that can't play his best on a football field. There is nothing to tie his playing to; nothing to provide a spark or an incentive to play."

Dropo Voted Over Ford as Rookie of '50

Nov. 8 (AP).—Big Walt Dropo, Boston Red Sox first baseman, has been voted rookie of the year for 1950 in the American League.

Dropo outdistanced the opposition with 15 votes from the 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers Association. Ed (Whitey) Ford, New York Yankee southpaw pitcher, was second with six. Chico Carrasquel, the Chicago White Sox shortstop sensation, was third with two votes.

Playing 136 games for the Red Sox, Dropo collected 180 hits for a .323 average. He slammed 34 home runs and tied teammate Vern Stephens for the league lead with 144 runs batted in.

It was left to the individual judgment of the voting members of the Baseball Writers Association whether a player qualifies as a rookie.

Presumably most of those who participated in this year's poll did not feel that Al Rosen, Cleveland's brilliant new third baseman, was eligible for the honor, as he did not receive a vote.

Rumors Have Coach Cherry Quitting Texas

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 8 (AP).—Rumors flew at the University of Texas today that Head Football Coach Blair Cherry would quit at the end of this season. Neither Cherry nor Athletic Director D. X. Bible would confirm the rumor, but neither would they deny it.

"My contract has three more years to run. All I have had on my mind is the Baylor game," Cherry said when queried. He said that was his only answer. (Texas plays Baylor Saturday).

Bible refused to say whether he and Cherry have discussed the possibility of Cherry's resigning. "I won't answer that question. It would be misinterpreted," Bible said. "Blair and I have discussed lots of things in the past."

"I've heard a lot of rumors just like you have. I've heard them all day long, but you'll have to get your answer from Blair," he said.

The football wolves have been howling at Cherry primarily because of his failure to carry the Longhorns to a Southwest Conference championship since he succeeded Bible as head coach in 1947. The pressure increased this fall when Texas—rated the conference favorite—got off to a slow start against outside competition and dropped a game to Oklahoma by one point, 14-13.

Then Texas dumped Rice, 35-7, and outfought top-rated Southern Methodist, 23-20, last Saturday. That reestablished Texas as the heavy favorite to win the title and go to the Cotton Bowl.

Bible observed that Cherry could "make a very fine connection with his brother if he wanted to." He was referring to the fact that Cherry, if he so desired, could go into the oil business with his brother, Alton Cherry of Dallas.

Barclay Picks G. W. and Terps, Rams Over G. U.

Coach George Barclay, whose Washington and Lee Generals have practically clinched the Southern Conference championship, yesterday picked George Washington to beat Furman, Maryland to drop North Carolina and Fordham over Georgetown.

Barclay, who coached at Maryland before shifting to W. & L. as head coach two years ago, thinks the Colonials have "too much experience for Furman," says Maryland will beat North Carolina by 20-17 and likes Fordham over Georgetown because "the game is being played in New York."

His other selections in the pick-the-winners contest: VIRGINIA over William and Mary; TULANE over Navy, DARTMOUTH over Columbia, NOTRE DAME over Pitt; ILLINOIS over Iowa; OKLAHOMA over Kansas; DUKE over Wake Forest; GEORGIA over Florida; MICHIGAN over Indiana; COLORADO over Missouri; KENTUCKY over Miss. State; PENN STATE over West Virginia; MICH. STATE over Minn.; OHIO STATE over Wisconsin; RICE over Arkansas; UCLA over California ("my sleeper"), TEXAS over Baylor and SMU over Texas A. & M.

Football Contest Selection

Texas, Baylor Play For League's Lead

BAYLOR vs. TEXAS Saturday for the Southwest Conference lead is one of the toughies in this week's Washington Post Pick-the-Winner Football Contest.

Baylor, coached by George Sauer, former Navy skipper, and led by the passing of Larry Isbell, has won two out of three conference games. The Bears are tied with Texas A. & M. for second place. Texas is in first place with four wins and no league losses.

To illustrate how close it should be, Texas beat Texas Tech, 28-14, and Baylor beat the same team, 26-12.

The winner of The Washington Post's football contest this week will receive two tickets to the Redskins-Baltimore Colts game at Griffith Stadium, November 26.

The contest winner also will receive two tickets to the intersectional collegiate headliner between Penn and Wisconsin, at Franklin Field, Philadelphia November 18, as well as first-class, round-trip transportation for two persons.

Contest Rules

THE CONTEST each week will include 20 major college games. The contestant will select the winner (or tie) in each of these games. There will also be a twenty-first game for which the contestant must give the "Probable Score," to be considered by the contest judges only in case two or more persons tie on the first 20 games.

All entries must be in the hands of the Football Contest Editor not later than 9 p. m. Friday of each week. Entries should be left at the Service Counter in the lobby of The Washington Post Bldg., 1337 E St. N. W.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week shall be declared the winner. In case of ties, all persons sharing in the tie will receive duplicate awards.

The decisions of the judges will be final.

Entries submitted must be legible, with the selections listed in the order they are announced in The Washington Post.

Entries may be handwritten or typewritten. However, carbon copies and mimeographed copies or copies made by any other duplicating machine will NOT be accepted. You may submit as many entries as you wish.

No employe of The Washington Post or member of his immediate family is eligible to participate in this contest.

Accord Reached on Series TV Money

VERSAILLES, Ky., Nov. 8 (AP).—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler said an agreement was reached here today to recommend the bulk of the $975,000 received from world series and television rights be put into the player pension fund.

The recommendation will be put before club owners at a November 16 meeting at Cincinnati.

Ray Robinson Decisions Dykes

CHICAGO, Nov. 8 (AP).—Ray "Sugar" Robinson, world's welterweight champion, tonight toyed with gangling Bobby Dykes, Miami, Fla., to win a split decision in their 10-round non-title bout in the Chicago Staduim.

Justice Still Lure

Thousands of Fans to Troop Back and Forth For Terps at Carolina, Redskins' Game Here

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

THE GREATEST troop movement between Washington and North Carolina since the War between the States will take place this weekend.

Armed with pennants and stimulants instead of muskets and vittles, more than 3000 Maryland fans will accompany the Terrapins to Chapel Hill for Saturday's clash with North Carolina in Kenan Stadium.

Returning to Washington the next day, the contingent will be joined by 3000 Tar Heels who'll converge on Washington to see their boy Charlie Justice strut his stuff against his football "cousins," the Philadelphia Eagles.

Maryland athletic officials yesterday reported they had already sold 2000 tickets at College Park for the Carolina game and had ordered an additional 1000 to take care of requests.

At the Redskins office, General Manager Richard McCana said practically all sections of Tarheelia would be represented in Griffith Stadium as the Justice-led Redskins try to upset the Eagles.

"Charlie has bought about 50 tickets himself," McCann said.

Not since the winning days of the Redskins have so many fans accompanied a local team to an out-of-town engagement as will follow Maryland to Chapel Hill this weekend. Years ago, when the Redskins were the scourge of pro football, some 10,000 Washingtonians would accompany the Tribe to New York and Philadelphia.

Justice set the pattern for the heavy traffic and colorful crowds which the Maryland-North Carolina game has attracted in the past several years.

In 1947, thousands of Carolinians, waving Confederate flags, moved on Washington to watch their beloved Choo-Choo lead the Tar Heels to a 19-0 victory at Griffith Stadium. The following year, more than 15,000 Carolinians were in the Griffith Stadium audience of 34,588 to see Justice again lead Carolina to a victory over the Terps, this time by a lopsided 49-20 edge.

IN SHORT — Maryland has lost all eight of its games to North Carolina since 1927 but is a 7-point favorite to beat the Tar Heels Saturday . . . For the first time since he injured his shoulder last Tuesday, Terp quarterback Jack Scaebath worked out yesterday. He's still unable to raise his passing hand over his shoulder but if he continues to improve he's likely to see action Saturday . . . The Carolina game is Maryland's last pitch toward a big bowl assignment. A decisive victory over the Tar Heels and the Terps will bounce right back into the New Year's Day picture despite defeats by Georgia and N. C. State . . .

Fullback Fullerton Lost to Terps for '50

Ed Fullerton, sophomore fullback, reinjured his knee in scrimmage yesterday and is lost to Maryland for the rest of the season, Trainer Duke Wyre reported.

Fullerton, varsity fullback, suffered a torn cartilage in his knee before the Duke game two weeks ago and aggravated it yesterday. He will be replaced by Karney Scioscia, a junior, who has alternated with Fullerton at fullback.

A's Set Precedent, Play Night Opener April 17 Against Nats

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8 (AP). The Philadelphia Athletics will break precedent in the American League when they open the 1951 season on Tuesday, April 17, with a night game. The Washington Nats will furnish the opposition.

This will be the first opening game to be played at night in the history of the league. Last season the St. Louis Cards opened their home stand at night to shatter opening day precedent in the senior circuit.

Culmone Rides 4 Winners at Pimlico, Nears U. S. Lead

Bill Bennings

AT PIMLICO.

DEAR FOLKS:

Larry S. MacPhail, the former baseball impressario who in the last few years has entered the racing and breeding field on a large scale, appears to have a capable candidate for the Pimlico Futurity, November 17, final day of the meeting. He paid $25,000 for the colt here last year. General Staff, a bay son of Mahmoud out of the fine mare Uvira II, and which was bred by the late Crispin Oglebay, has given evidence that he's at his peak for the Futurity engagement. Retirement of horses like Battlefield enhance the chances of the MacPhail colt. Election Day brought a handle of $925,669, which was gratifying to the management since the comparable day a year ago saw only $806,249 wagered. See you on the rail.

BILL.

Joe Trails Shoemaker's 317 by Four

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

PIMLICO, Nov. 8.—It took a second World War and a long train of circumstances to make Joe Culmone a jockey on U. S. tracks, but no one can deny he isn't making the most of opportunity.

The Italian refugee, who was drifting rather aimlessly around New York and New Jersey three years back grabbing a few winks in pool room chairs, is now the toast of the turf.

Culmone rang up four winners in seven tries to make it nine victories for this week, and 13 in the five days of the current meeting.

313 Winners

Young Joe, who believes that every horse Agent Slim Edwards assigns to him is another Man O'War, now has a total of 313 winners for 1950 and is cutting down the lead held by Willie Shoemaker, now operating on the West Coast. Shoemaker had 317 going into today's Hollywood Park program.

Culmone turned in an assortment of winning performances today. He took horses to the front and stayed there, brought them from far back and rated others for the stretch drive.

He Boots in Roman Bath

His fourth success of the program came in the Andy K. Purse, featuring the day's action. This was a come-from-behind job and he booted J. Marsch's Roman Bath to the wire 2½ lengths ahead of Mrs. D. N. Lee's Remembrance with Pentagon Stable's Chloe third in he field of 10.

Roman Bath paid $6.60 and despite high weight of 122 pounds, was clocked in 1:11 2-5 for the six furlongs.

Culmone's first winner came aboard Clinton Farm's Pip Pip, a $3.40 favorite in the second race. This victory put the finishing touches on a mere $7.20 daily double, started when L. W. Jennings' Discovert took the first at $4.40.

Joe came back in the third race to win with another favorite, G. S. Smith's The Spaniel, returning $5.20. He made it four for the day while riding Oats for Brookmeade Stable, the colt paying only $2.80 to win, the shortest straight price of the meeting.

Wendy Barrie M. C. At Turf Writers' Dinner

PIMLICO, Nov. 8. — Wendy Barrie of movie and television fame, will be mistress of ceremonies at the annual dinner of the Maryland Racing Writers Association at the Belvedere Hotel in Baltimore tomorrow night. An award will be made to the breeder of the "Maryland horse of the year," to be selected by the writers.

BIG TIME SMALL TIMERS—Add up the weights of the Landon third graders and the Cleveland Park Jets and the total probably won't equal the tonnage of a Redskins' tackle, but the pee-wees play just as hard. Above, Arthur Ryall, of the Jets, pulls down Peter Townsend, of Landon, after Pete had skipped for a five-yard gain in the annual clash yesterday at Landon. Landon won, 13-6

Eagles Tops In Rushing, Pass Defense

The Redskins will be trying to snap their six-game losing streak against the best running team in pro football Sunday when they hookup with the Philadelphia Eagles at Griffith Stadium.

The Steve Van Buren-powered Eagles have averaged 214 yards on the ground in their first seven games. Van Buren, holder of the NFL ground-gaining championship and top man in that department for four of the last six years, has finally climbed into the first ten with a 3.9 average on 93 carries.

The Eagles' pass defense is also the league's best. The opposition has managed to complete only 35 percent of its aerials against Joe Muha, Frank Reagan and the other defensive Eagle stalwarts.

The only department in which a Redskin is among the first five in kickoff returns. Hall Haynes is the league's second best in this speciality with a 42.8 yard average on five returns.

17 of 38 Invited To Presidential Cup 'Interested'

Seventeen of the 38 teams which were sent "feelers" to play in the projected Presidential Cup game December 9 at the University of Maryland have replied that they "are interested."

The was the report of Game Chairman Charles Garity, who represents the sponsoring D. C. American Legion, yesterday at a meeting of the selection committee in the Wilard Hotel.

The selection committee announced the result of a poll of newspapermen and radio announcers in Washington and around the Nation, rating the teams for possible invitations.

The ratings are: (1) Oklahoma, (2) Kentucky, (3) Ohio State, (4) Texas, (5) Southern Methodist, (6) Miami, Fla., (7) Army, (8) Princeton, (9) Tennessee, (10) California. Ohio State, Texas, Army and California have turned down the "feelers."

Dudley Portrait Unveiling Friday

A life-size portrait of Halfback Bill Dudley, of the Redskins, will be unveiled and hung in the clubrooms of the Touchdown Club tomorrow at 7:30 p. m.

The ceremonies are being sponsored by the Lynchburg, Va., chapter of the Virginia Alumni Association. Dudley was an All-America at Virginia.

The public is invited. Tickets sell for $7.50 each, with part of the receipts from the dinner affair going toward payment of the portrait.

Woodward Prep Wins

The Woodward Prep junior varsity chalked up its third triumph in a row, defeating the Georgetown Prep jayvee, 25-13, yesterday at Prep. Phil Richbourg scored two touchdowns for the victors.

Would Be 6th Defeat

Hoyas Buck Odds Again Against Fordham; Thompson, Doyle, Murphy Question Marks

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Sorely depleted Georgetown yesterday continued to prepare for what the wise boys say will be their sixth defeat against Fordham Saturday in the Polo Grounds.

Pregame odds favor the Rams by 13 points.

The Hoyas studiously are avoiding contact work, they just can't afford it. Key men still question marks are Halfbacks Bugs Thompson, Dick Doyle and Terry Murphy.

Loss of Thompson and Murphy could be critical. They're top defensive halfbacks and Fordham's Dick Doheny is well-remembered for passing Georgetown silly in the Rams' 42-0 victory last year.

The Hoyas' 1-5 record looks a little shabbier against Fordham's 4-1 mark. Only Yale beat Ed Danowski's boys, 21-14. Against their lone mutual opponent both teams won. B. C. was taken by Georgetown, 20-10, and by Fordham, 26-6.

That Fordham score might be a little misleading. Actually, the luckless Eagles pushed Fordham all over the field in the second half. If Georgetown happens to be at full strength, the game could be a tossup.

NOTES—The series between the Jesuit schools is an odd one. It started in 1890 and Georgetown has an impressive 13-6-3 margin . . . The Hoyas had seven straight over Fordham before last year's loss . . . However, there's a conspicuous lapse between 1928 and 1946 . . . That's approximately the time Fordham was the terror of the East . . . Things have changed: Athletic Director Jack Coffey recently sent out flyers to the alumni to support the last three home games . . . His letter said attendance "might determine whether or not intercollegiate football will be continued at Fordham" . . .

Georgetown's Dick Haesler no longer can be called its placekicking specialist . . . The 6-foot-2, 210-pounder stepped out of character in the Miami game last week . . . After Miami registered a safety, Haesler kicked off from his 20, came up field and recovered a Miami fumble on its 40-yard line . . . A fine high school fullback, Haesler has carried the ball exactly four times since he's been on the Hilltop . . . He won't be soon forgotten at Georgetown, though, his field goal beat B. C. last year for the Hoyas' first victory in 19 years in the series . . .

Dunbar Earns Last-Minute Tie

Harold Smith caught a 35-yard touchdown pass from Tom Gray with 25 seconds remaining to give Dunbar a 6-6 tie with Phelps in a City Series game yesterday at Brooks Stadium.

Gray's attempted conversion from placement was blocked.

Phelps scored midway in the second quarter when Robert Hawkins ran 6 yards off tackle. James Warren's try for the extra point from placement was blocked.

Phelps has lost one game and tied one in the series, and Dunbar has tied both of its starts.

Anti-stalling

ESSO EXTRA GASOLINE

It helps prevent stalling . . . those irritating start-up, parking, and traffic-light stalls so common on damp, chilly days.

It's especially good in cars with AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSIONS — where restarting is more troublesome.

It's a big fall extra for your money in Esso Extra — the high-test gasoline long famous for quick starting, fast warm-up, high anti-knock power and long mileage! And Esso Extra is the ONLY premium gasoline with patented Esso Solvent Oil that fights harmful engine deposits.

Don't stall another day . . . Try a tankful right away!

And when you're in, there's no better time to let your Esso Dealer give your car a complete check-up for the winter driving you'll be doing!

Don't let this happen to you!

Stalling that occurs on cool, humid days (30° to 55° temperatures, humidity above 65%) is generally caused by carburetor "icing." Evaporation of the highly volatile gasolines required for modern cars has a refrigerating effect which freezes moisture out of the air, accumulating icy frost in the carburetor. New Fall-Grade Anti-Stalling Esso Extra Gasoline helps eliminate this cause of stalling, which is experienced with most cars on the road today. It will not, of course, prevent stalling caused by faulty carburetor adjustment or electrical failure.

Three-Unit Mechanical Force Now Printing Post at New Building . . .

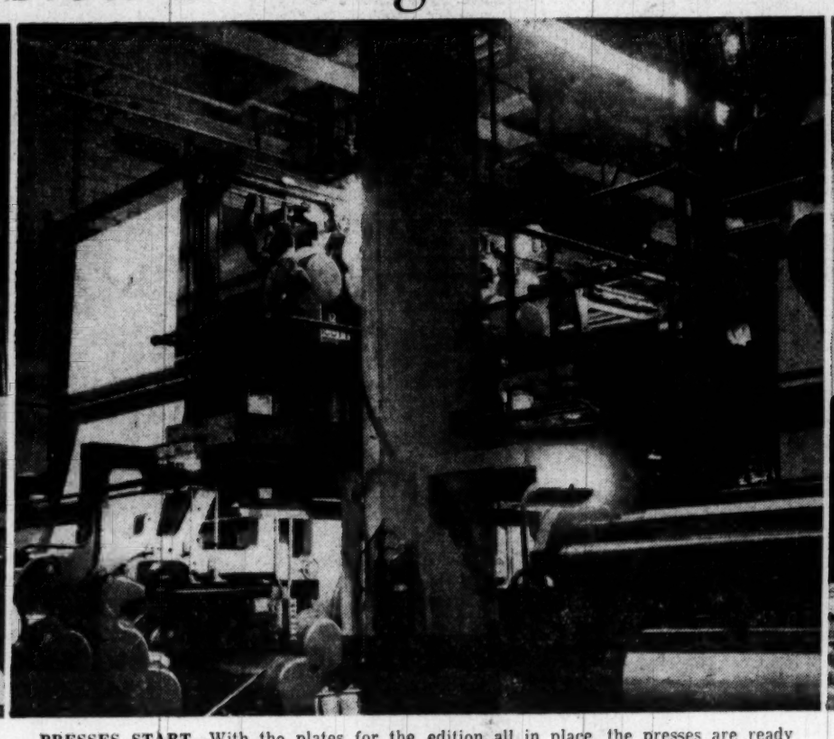
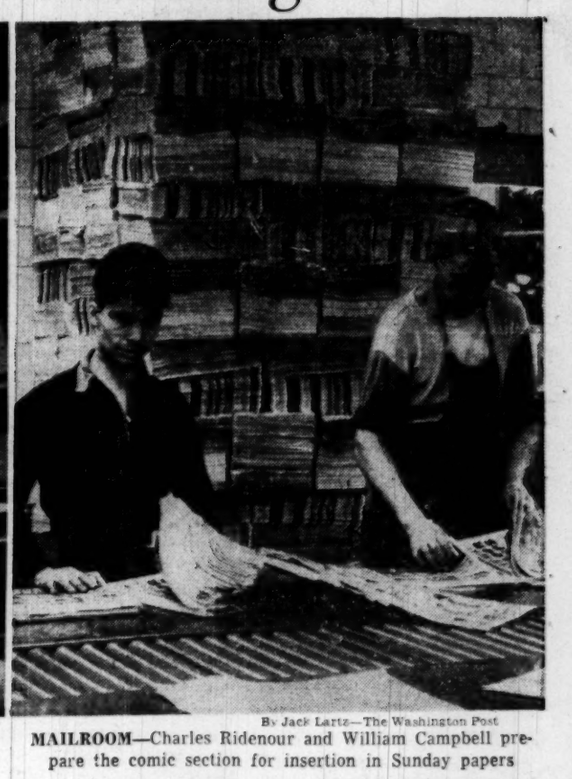
ROLLS—Paper moves on a small railway



PRESSES START—With the plates for the edition all in place, the presses are ready to roll. The high-powered units can reach a speed of 50,000 papers an hour



By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

MAILROOM—Charles Ridenour and William Campbell prepare the comic section for insertion in Sunday papers

This week marks the first time the presses, stereotype and mailing departments—all featuring the last word in newspaper equipment — have operated as a unit in the new seven-story plant of The Washington Post at 1515 L st, nw.

The move did not happen overnight. It has been a gradual operation which began October 12 when the newspaper's new Scott presses printed a small portion of The Post.

This weekend the news staff and composing room department expect to move to their modern, air-conditioned quarters.

But the advertising department, and front counter where ads are placed, subscriptions taken and back papers sold, will remain at 1337 E street for sometime.

On the mechanical side, the past few weeks have been a "shakedown" period for operators to learn the intricacies of their new equipment.

For the pressmen, it was a matter of familiarizing themselves with two eight-unit Scott presses, each with four superimposed color units, capable of printing in three colors and black and white.

The presses can produce a 64-page paper in four sections at a speed of 50,000 an hour.

They are equipped with flying pasters—devices which automatically catch the expiring newsprint roll and paste on a new roll without a serious drop in printing speed.

Two 100-horsepower and two 150-horsepower motors run the presses.

The pressroom has two features old-timers never dreamed of; flourescent lighting and air-conditioning.

The pressroom has its own separate air-conditioning equipment because of ink mist and paper dust when the presses are running. A huge ceiling duct takes out the inky air and smaller ducts bring in fresh, water-cooled air.

The remainder of the building has a separate system.

The stereotypers—the men responsible for transforming type into casts from which a newspaper page is printed—will be able to do double the amount of work in the past.

This department's equipment includes a mechanism for placing a nickel finish on press plates. The process insures superior reproduction of color photographs and special black-white picture for transforming sections.

But the mail room boys are currently operating one of the plant's biggest eye-catchers.

As the folded papers come from the second floor pressroom to the third floor mail room on a conveyor belt, they are fed into two automatic bundling contraptions. In the trade, they are known as Signode-Parker wire-tying machines.

The machine ties 25 bundles of papers a minute. The bundles sweep down a chute to a rear loading platform.

All loading and unloading will be done from the rear of the building—none on crowded L st.

Nation Ready To Observe Armistice

Truman to Place Wreath at Arlington Ceremony Saturday; Legion to Participate

The Nation, again in the midst of armed strife, pauses Saturday to honor its dead of three wars in Armistice Day ceremonies.

The President, on the thirty-second anniversary of the first Armistice, has asked Americans to pray for peace to make good "the promise for which our heroes fought and died."

Escorted by members of the armed forces, he will lay a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in traditional ceremonies at Arlington National Cemetery at 11 a. m. Saturday.

Truman will be joined there by Erle Cocke, jr., American Legion national commander, who will make an Armistice Day address at 11:30 a. m. in the memorial amphitheater. Many veterans' and patriotic organizations will lay wreaths at the tomb

Memorial services for America's war dead will be held in churches over the city on the weekend. Special masses for world peace will be celebrated in Catholic churches in the Washington Archdiocese Saturday. A city-wide prayer period for peace will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, from noon until 1:15 p. m. Saturday at Shiloh Baptist Church, 9th and P sts. nw.

The Department of Defense has announced that officials and armed forces officers will make speeches over the country,

For Government workers, Saturday will be a holiday as usual, but there will be no compensatory day off preceding or following the legal holiday, according to the Civil Service Commission.

Post offices in the area will be open until noon, and most retail and department stores have indicated they will remain open the entire day. The large chain grocery stores will be open Saturday but will close the following Monday.

War Is Lesser of Two Evils, Visiting British Rector Says

The Rev. Canon Bryan Green, Anglican Missioner and rector of Birmingham, England, was greeted by more than 2500 persons, about a third teen-agers, at a special reunion service at Washington Cathedral last night.

Canon Green, who spoke to more than 25,000 people during a 10-day mission here, returned at the special invitation of the Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, who opened last night's service.

Before the service opened Canon Green permitted his younger auditors to submit questions which ranged from "Do you have to wear a hat in church?" to "How do you justify the commandment, 'Thou Shalt Not Kill,' with the present world situation?"

To the latter, the missioner replied in part, "The worst thing that Christians can do is to pretend that war is not sin, even though we are forced into it as the lesser of two evils."

During the service, Canon Green spoke on "Christian Discipleship." Earlier yesterday, he addressed 700 students on the Universary of Maryland campus.

He left last night for Houston, Tex., to conduct another mission. He will return to England after conducting a mission at San Francisco, November 23 to December 4.

Says an Expert:

Feeling Bad? Harsh Noise May Be Cause

Noise, as most parents of small children have suspected for years, can drive a person crazy, an expert on the subject said here yesterday.

Usually, however, it just drags down your health and productivity and makes life miserable, said R. Allen Wilson, an acoustics engineer and national authority on noise abatement problems.

He spoke on "Noise and Its Effects on Human Beings" at a Library of Congress conference on environmental influences on living.

Noise, he summarized, lowers the human faculties, slackens and dulls the mental processes, clouds judgment and reduces precision of action, decreases efficiency and drags personality to a lower level.

It also makes people irritable, pessimistic and grumpy, unpleasant to live with, and unpleasant even to themselves, he added.

Analyzing the factors that go into an "objectionable, noisy environment, he listed them as:

1. No one minds his own noise, only the commotion caused by the other fellow.

2. Where talking can't be done easily, or heard readily, without strain, the place is uncomfortably noisy.

3. Sounds hard to recognize, and from sources not easily located, make man nervous and jittery.

4. Distant sounds which don't die down as expected, are very irritating.

5. Intermittent sound, noises cutting in and out of the over-all (sound environment) level at unexpected times are worse than continuous sound.

Another speaker, Samuel L. Hooper, president of the 11-year-old National Noise Abatement Council, discussed noise expense to the American payroll. He said the efficiency loss from noise effects on one clerk-typist may cost the employer $1500 a year.

George Hess To Head New Grand Jury

George R. Hess, 44, of 6400 8th st. nw., yesterday was appointed foreman of the District grand jury which will sit here for the next two months.

Hess is plant supervisor for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

Deputy foreman will be Bertrand P. Ramsey, 49, of 1213 Congress st. se. He is a physicist for the Naval Ordnance Laboratory.

The other grand jurors, all sworn before Judge Edward A Tamm of District Court, follow:

Miss Mary J. Moroney, 54, telephone operator, 615 I st. se.; Mrs. Frances C. Morris, 58, housewife, 3618 Patterson st. nw.; Mrs. Myrtle D. Norman, 46, housewife, 1637 Trinidad ave. ne.; Vernon W. Porter, 53, State Department employe, 1841 M st. ne., and Samuel J. Porter, 35, baker's helper, 1201 I st. ne.

Mrs. Ethel L. Seward, 58, housewife, 3709 Reservoir rd. nw.; Mrs. Helen D. Uhrin, 25, secretary, 5037 Kansas ave. nw.; Marvin L. Ward, 31, clerk, 3005 20th st. ne.; Mrs. Marian H. Waxter, 40, housewife, 3521 28th st. ne.; Mrs. Edythe S. Wilbert, 43, clerk, 934 P st. nw., and Arnold G. Wilson, 41, X-ray technician, 1820 Clydesdale pl. nw.

Love Founded on 4 Factors, Catholic U. Sociologist Says

Most marriage failures result because the selection of a mate was based on only one or two of the four factors constituting love, a Catholic University professor said here last night.

Dr. A. H. Clemens, of the Sociology department of Catholic University, listed the four factors as: will, intellect, emotion and physical attraction.

The will—and its resultant sacrifices on behalf of the mate—is the most important factor, he declared.

"Sacrifice is the test of love," he said.

Mass media of information, Dr. Clemens said, have distorted a full and mature conception of love into "this mysteriously romantic sort of thing.

"Youth is marrying on this premise, and is marrying wrongly," he added.

Dr. Clemens lectured as part of Catholic University's adult education program.

Transit Co. Asks 13 Pct. Pepco Cut

Power Bill Costs $200,000 Too Much, PUC Hearing Told; First Bid Doubled

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

Capital Transit Co. raised its sights yesterday and asked the District Public Utilities Commission to reduce its electricity rates by 13 percent, or $200,000 a year.

That is the amount Capital Transit claims it is being overcharged by Potomac Electric Power Co. Two weeks ago, at the Pepco rate hearing, the transit company contended its bill was only $100,000 too high.

Ironically, it was a request for further information on the subject by Pepco Attorney James F. Reilly that caused Capital Transit to double its claim. Capital Transit Comptroller J. E. Heberle had based the alleged $100,000 overcharge on cost figures submitted by Pepco at this hearing and on other cost figures approved by the PUC in 1933.

Heberle told the PUC yesterday that in looking up the answer to Reilly's question he found he had used an incorrect factor that gave only half of the actual overcharge.

9.2 Percent Increase

Pepco has asked for a system-wide 9.2 percent increase that would yield an estimated additional $3,379,000 next year in operating revenue. Residential rates would go up an average of 4.3 percent under the requested rates.

But Pepco wants to boost Capital Transit's annual bill by $557,000 or 60 per cent. It contends the transit company is not paying its fair share. Capital Transit has been the most vigorous opponent of the proposed increase.

Earlier yesterday, V. A. McElfresh, chief auditor and accountant for the PUC, submitted figures indicating District consumers should pay an additional $1,835,500 if his recommendation of a 2½-million-dollar system-wide increase is approved.

Basing his figures on Pepco's sales, revenues and customer demand, McElfresh determined the increase should be divided up this way: District consumers, 73.42 percent; Maryland, 21.5 percent or $538,167; Virginia, 5.05 percent, or $126,333.

Cross-Examination Stressed

Most of yesterday's session was devoted to cross-examination of McElfresh and Heberle. Reilly sought in vain to make McElfresh admit that a 2½-million increase would not be enough to give the company a fair return.

PUC Counsel Lloyd B. Harrison questioned Heberle in an effort to show that the value of Capital Transit property in the District used rent-free by Pepco is less than the $1,732,427 Capital Transit claims. Capital Transit contends that if its rates are increased, Pepco should pay rent on these substations, cables and other equipment.

The hearing will resume today at 10 a. m. in the District Building board room

Author to Speak Here

Walter M. Bastian Sworn In As Judge of District Court

The Washington Post

TAKES OATH—Walter M. Bastian (left) is sworn in as a judge of the District Court by Chief Justice of the United States Fred M. Vinson as Chief Judge Bolitha Laws (center) looks on Walter Maximillian Bastian, 58, was sworn in as a judge of the District Court yesterday, Chief Justice of the United States Fred M. Vinson administered the oath of office.

A Washington native who has practiced law here for 34 years, Bastian succeeds Judge Jennings Bailey who retired November 1.

In his first judicial act yesterday, Judge Bastian administered the oath of office to Fred L. P. Siddons as a jury commissioner. In 1915 Bastian received his first courthouse job, a $1000-a-year secretary, from Siddons' father, District Judge Fred L. Siddons.

Judge Bastian became the third member of the 1913 Georgetown University Law School class who is now sitting as a District Court judge, joining Judge David A. Pine and Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws.

In a crowded courtroom, Judge Bastian said he "deeply appreciated the honor" of his appointment and said he hoped he could "half fill the shoes of the grand gentleman I am succeeding." Judge Bailey sat at his side throughout the ceremonies.

Starting today, Judge Bastian will preside in non-jury civil cases, assignment Judge Edward A. Tamm revealed. His chambers will be in the Standard Oil Building at 3d st., Pennsylvania ave. nw.

'Shipment' Interrupted; Trucker Held

The routine watchfulness of two Sixth Precinct station policemen broke up a highly unroutine shipment from the May Hardware Co. warehouse at Kansas ave. and Blair rd. nw. last night.

Sergt. Louis H. Giersch and Pvt. Otto Parris were making a routine check in their scout car at 5:45 p. m. when they spotted a truck behind the warehouse.

A closer look revealed two men methodically loading large household appliance from the warehouse to the truck.

The officers arrested James J. Kelson, 29, who said he was unemployed and lives at 1356 Canal st. sw. Kelson was charged with housebreaking.

Police in a half-dozen other cars and on several motorcycles were combing the woods behind the warehouse last night in search of another man described as a dark-skinned Negro, 5 feet 8 inches, wearing overalls.

Kelson told police his companion, who ran back into the building and escaped through a side door, had worked as a laborer at the warehouse since yesterday. He left the side door open after work, Kelson said.

Police said the truck contained three refrigerators, one gas range and an automatic washing machine, a total wholesale value of $1159.

Three more refrigerators were waiting to be loaded, police said.

Art Dealer's Tax Sentence Is Upheld

A prison sentence and fine for Benjamin S. Bell, Washington art dealer, for evading $55,813 in income taxes was upheld yesterday by the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals in Baltimore.

Bell, president of the Washington Art Galleries and Auction Rooms at 722 13th st. nw., was sentenced to six months and fined $17,500. He has been free on bail pending the appeal action. Bell lives at 9707 Old Georgetown rd., Bethesda.

The art dealer's appeal was based on a contention that the Government's estimate of his net worth was unreliable.

The appeals court rejected this argument because Bell had not kept detailed records. United States Attorney Bernard J. Flynn put Bell's net worth at $82,000 before 1943 and at $201,000 at the end of 1945.

Bell attempted to show part of his increased wealth was due to gifts from his mother-in-law. The Government countered with tax returns in which the art dealer claimed his mother-in-law as a dependent.

Health Budget Gains Support Of Chest Group

129 New Positions, $175,000 Outlay For Health Center Approved by UCS

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Members of the United Community Services' health section yesterday voted their "special support" to more than half of the Health Department's budget requests for expanded services.

Specifically, they sanctioned the budget requests for 129 new positions, to cost $471,110, and approved the department's plea for $175,000 to buy land for a Central Northwest Washington health center.

Hearings on the 1952 budget already have been held by the District Commissioners. In all, exclusive of its hospitals' budget, the Health Department asked for 214 new positions, costing $966,536.

The meeting, first ever held by the health section to appraise a District department budget, was at Hotel Burlington. About 75 members attended.

Five "Special Support" Projects

Among projects singled out for special support, besides approval of the proposed health center, were:

1. Budget requests totaling $128,120 to permit the bureau of maternal and child welfare to staff itself and shoulder expenses previously provided by special Federal funds no longer available.

2. Addition of 31 public health nurses, two supervisors of public health nursing, three clerk-typists and one clerk-stenographer, all sought for the bureau of public nursing.

3. The request for 27 new inspectors, engineers and technicians for the proposed expansion of sanitation and rodent-control program of the bureau of public health engineering.

4. Employment of three extra helpers in the department's bureau of public health education.

5. Budget requests for 10 skilled and semiskilled employes to expand the department's home care program for chronic invalids who would otherwise need hospitalization at the District's expense.

Care of Indigents

Other projects that won the group's approval included proposed rate increases to District hospitals for care of eligible indigent patients, and a number of lesser budget requests for new workers in the department's many divisions.

Section officials said the projects singled out were selected on an "essential needs" basis, and the action was not to be interpreted as disapproving the other proposed expansion projects of the Health Department.

The second recommendations are to be submitted later to the executive committee of UCS.

In Montgomery

Suit Seeks To Nullify Road Code

Suit to nullify the Montgomery County road code was filed yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville.

The suit, filed by Attorney David E. Betts, of Rockville, for the Palisades, Inc., of Kensington, Md., contends that the Maryland constitution limits enacting of legislation to one month a year, May in Montgomery, and that the adoption of the road code ordinance in August was in violation of this provision.

Palisades, Inc., owns a large subdivision tract near Kensington, Md., and seeks an injunction barring the county from enforcing the road code. The suit further contends that the county has no right to enact a road code which has different requirements from those promulgated by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

It further avers that the provision of the code which permits waiving of any provision after a public hearing attempts to grant a wholly unregulated discretion which would permit the council to discriminate in the granting of such waivers.

The suit asks the court to declare the code unconstitutional and to enjoin the country from enforcing the code.

Program of Information on

WORLD AFFAIRS

TEST NO. 5

The Program of Information on World Affairs is sponsored by The Washington Post to promote popular interest in events of world significance. As a part of the program The Washington Post publishes each Thursday of the school year a test on one of 26 topics of world affairs. The Program makes it possible for school children, adult groups and individuals to measure their knowledge of world affairs. It also includes a guidebook with study outlines on the 26 topics. The Program is directed by J. Edward Gerald, University of Minnesota Professor of Journalism, under guidance of Edgar B. Wesley, University Professor of Education.

Answers will be printed in The Post on Saturday. Some of the test questions may involve degrees of correctness rather than indisputable facts. In such cases select the BEST answer.

Amanda Carne Dead at 78 In Alexandria

Miss Amanda Rosalie Carne, 78, a fifth generation Alexandrian, died of a heart attack Tuesday shortly before she was to leave her home at 703 King st. to go to the polls.

She was the sister of Richard L. Carne, who worked for The Washington Post for 37 years before his death in 1948 A Post circulation man in Alexander, Carne was the only man to bring news of the great Knickerbocker Theater disaster into his territory in January, 1922, when a severe snowstorm choked the roads.

Miss Carne and her sister, Miss Mary A. Carne were avid collectors of Alexandria history and Carne family history.

Until 1937, the Carne sisters had for 20 years operated a book store and candy shop at the King st. residence.

The male members of the family have all been newspapermen, beginning with William F. Carne who wrote George Washington's obituary in the Alexandria Gazette.

A later William F. Carne, Miss Carne's father, was one the first city desk men of the Washington Star, and also served as superintendent of Alexandria schools. Her uncle, Richard L. Carne, was also a superintendent of schools before he left to become a Catholic priest.

In addition to her sister, Miss Carne is survived by three nephews, W. Lindsay Carne of Fairfax, owner of the Fairfax Herald; Richard L. Carne, Huntington, Fairfax County, area circulaiton supervisor for the Times Herald; and William F. Carne, Alexandria, an employe of the Northern Virginia Shoppers' Journal, and two nieces, Miss Mary C. Carne, supervisor of nurses of the Alexandria Health Department and Mrs. R. Lyle Menser, Alexandria.

Requiem Mass will be said at 9:30 a. m. Friday in St. Mary's Catholic Church, Alexandria. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, Alexandria.

Massage Helps Spur Skin Tone and Texture

(Second Day of Blanche's Beauty Program)

By Ann Lawrence

IF YOU HAVE a dry skin, you can recognize the symptoms: a finely textured skin, a taut feeling over the entire skin area; flakiness or a general, unmoist appearance to the skin surface, sensitivity to heat and cold.

"But what about these oily patches on my nose and chin?," Blanche asked.

Oily areas, she learned, frequently occur even in dry skin conditions where the circulation is the poorest, around the forehead, and, as in Blanche's case, around the nose and on the chin.

MASSAGE WILL HELP to clear this condition. And massage, with a good, rich lubricating agent, is a "must" for her dry-skin condition. Proper massage will stimulate the flow of blood to these areas which now seem to be oily. Proper massage, with the lubricant, will give new tone and strength to the facial muscles, while the lubricant itself will keep the surface-skin moist and fresh-looking, re-supplying the natural oils which diminish as we grow older.

But the first step had to be the proper cleansing for Blanche's skin. Because soap and water do have drying tendencies, they were banished for the time being from her program. Instead, a special dry skin cleanser, one which contains a lubricant, in addition to its cleansing agents, was substituted.

Blanche complained that this would be a time-consuming process. Not at all, she discovered. For the cleanser is merely applied lightly with the fingertips, over her entire face and throat with an upward and outward motion. No rubbing is necessary. The cleanser does the work.

SHE ALLOWED THE CREAM to remain on for a few seconds, then tissued off the surface cream.

Then we showed her how to remove every final vestige, with a skin freshner especially compounded for dry skins. (It contains no alcohol to further deplete the supply of oils). First, she dampened a pad of cotton in cold water, then saturated the surface of the moistened pad with the freshener, wiping it over her face and neck. Next, with a fresh tissue, she gently blotted her face dry. The cold water, plus the freshener, closed up the pores, left her face smoothly clean and ready for a powder base.

Blanche would follow the same cleansing method at night but before retiring, she would spend ten minutes on a program of massage and lubrication. And she admitted that it took no more time than her usual soap-and-water cleanings.

Distaff Side of Diplomacy Means High Fashion and Glamour

By Evelyn Hayes

EVERY GIRL HAS DAYDREAMED one time or another about what she'd buy if she were queen. For Mrs. William O'Dwyer, the equivalent of that dream became reality when she selected her wardrobe for the exciting life she will live as wife of the new Ambassador to Mexico.

In choosing her new wardrobe, this slim, pretty woman, who was one of New York's most glamorous models before she married the former Mayor of New York, has shown her fashion know-how by insisting on a wardrobe that reflects her own personality and her preference for simplicity.

The lovely former Sloan Simpson has chosen a relatively small wardrobe to take to Mexico. It is built around three colors—red, violet and, of course, black. There are three Carnegie suits of the type she favors—single-breasted with small collar, rounded hipline and slim but walkable skirt. For daytime, two of these suits are wool—one in flecked violet worsted, the other black. For dressier occasions, she'll wear a black silk twill suit with slightly flared skirt.

THE SIMPLE BLACK DRESS that's a must in any wardrobe is a slim crepe with kerchief-pointed peplum (at Garfinckel's!) designed by Mollie Parnis, who also designed a simple grey side-draped taffeta for important luncheons.

For the glamour side of her wardrobe (as though Carnegie wool suits aren't the last word in glamour!) Mrs. O'Dwyer is taking three cocktail dresses. Miss Carnegie designed one, with black velvet sleeveless bodice and full black taffeta skirt.

Charles James did the second of these, a molded, side-draped affair of red silk faille. The third is a Mollie Parnis design of red taffeta with low squared neckline, puffed sleeves and full skirt.

ONE SHORT AND TWO LONG is the way Mrs. O'Dwyer chose her evening gowns. Claire McCardell designed one of the long dresses of greyed violet satin with a clever full-cornered skirt that may be hooked into a slim line. The other is Charles James' fabulous portrait gown with ruby red velvet bodice and polonaise-draped skirt of satin over a full pleated starched white underskirt. Garfinckel's has this, too. Just cash in a gilt-edged bond or three—and it's yours.

Nylon tulle over taffeta is the theme of the short evening dress by David Gottlieb. To wear over all, Mrs. O'Dwyer has a navy blue satin loose coat.

A black wool "tent" coat and a gabardine topcoat-raincoat are the two cloth coats Mrs. O'Dwyer is taking with her and for Mexico's cold winters she is also taking a mink stole and two fur coats. One is of Alaskan sealskin—long and fitted; the other is of luscioously soft, blond clipped otter cut like a full trench coat. It was designed by Maximilian.

Mrs. O'Dwyer—like all well-dressed women—knows her type and sticks to it. She likes small simple hats and compromises but rarely. For this newest wardrobe she has compromised to the extent of a little velvet pillbox with soaring plume—this a concession to the Mexican ladies' partiality for rather elaborate cocktail hats.

Benefits Goodwill Guild

500 Women, 2 Men Applaud Fashion Show

By Nicha Searle

OVER 500 WOMEN and two lone men gathered at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday for the Goodwill Guild benefit luncheon and, incidentally, to view Mollie Parnis' collection of daytime and cocktail dresses.

The two men were Lou Scobell, sales manager of Mollie Parnis, who represented the American designer in her absence due to her husband's illness, and James C. Dulin, president of Goodwill Industries.

Proceeds of the luncheon and fashion show will benefit the Guild's project of home extension service for homebound persons. The Guild is underwriting the work of Goodwill Industries which includes work therapy by an occupational therapist at the home of handicapped persons. It is part of the rehabilitation program of Goodwill Industries.

GUILD MEMBERS and their guests were given a "sneak preview" into the spring fashions. Many of the Mollie Parnis creations were never shown anywhere before their presentation yesterday.

The fashion show, presented by Julius Garfinckel and Co., included Mollie Parnis daytime and cocktail dresses, her sunny climes' creations and the coming spring fashions, as well as copies of gowns from noted French designers.

The Parnis fashions which made the biggest hit with the audience were the "clock-watcher" suits. They are tailored suits which shed their jackets to become short formals for evening wear.

FEATURED in the collection were the "modified infata silhouette" and the chemise dress, a straight-hanging gown which can be worn belted or unbelted.

Oriental Scholar To Be Feted

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

RENE GROUSSET, HERE TO LECTURE at Dumbarton Oaks on Friday, will be entertained at tea this afternoon by M. and Mme. Rene Batigne.

The Batignes, just back from France and in their house in Georgetown for the late autumn season, are authorities on art. M. Grousset knows all (or nearly all) there is to know about the Orient. He's written and lectured on all phases of the subject, is director general of the French Oriental Museum and a member of the Academie Francaise—called the "40 Immortals" because of the distinguished names, limited to that number, on its roster.

Over the years Rene Grousset and M. and Mme. Batigne have forged the bonds of strong friendship. Yet it's the first time that M. Grousset could be persuaded to visit his old friends in Washington. Recently he's been in China and in Japan where he saw General MacArthur. Now that he's here, he has promised the Batignes at least four days of his company.

Rene Batigne, former curator of the French refugee collection at the National Gallery on loan during the war, has more recently been pottery curator at the ancient museum in Vallauris, France.

Picasso and Matisse, newest disciples of ceramic art, work at the town's pottery kiln and Mme. Batigne has been studying along with the two great French modern painters.

Before long Rene Batigne and his American-born wife, will be off on a trip, Mr. Batigne to give a series of lectures in the South. After that? Well, they'll probably be heading back to France.

DOWN THE MIDDLE AISLE

MISS ALWILDA FERRIS, daughter of Capt. Floyd Ferris, USN, and Mrs. Ferris, was guest of honor at a shower given last evening by Miss Clare Foster, daughter of Vice Admiral and Mrs. Edwin D. Foster. Miss Ferris will be married to Ross de Matteo on November 25.

Among the guests were Mrs. Hugh Richardson. Miss Jane Lingo, Miss Polly Norment, Mrs. Jerre Boggs, Miss Annie Laurie Rankin, Miss Flavia Lee, Mrs. Jacques M. Kelly, Senorias Marina and Teresa Prado.

ALONG EMBASSY ROW

THE AMBASSADOR OF TURKEY AND MME. ERKIN gave a dinner at the embassy last evening, with Mme. Pandit, Ambassador of India, their ranking guest. Others were the Ambassador of Greece Athanase G. Politis, the Minister of the Hashemite Kingdom of the Jordan Yusuf Haikal and Mme. Haikal, Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Nitze, Mr. and Mrs. Camille Chautemps, Mr. and Mrs. Norbert Anschuetz, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Antony Wadden, the Rev. Thomas Daniels, Mr. and Mrs. Achilles Sakell, Mr. and Mrs. James Souby, Mrs. Necdet Kent, wife of the Turkish Consul General at New York, and the First Secretary of the Embassy, Melih Esenbel, and Mme. Esenbel.

DATEBOOK DATA

PARTIES FOR PERLE—Our Minister to Luxembourg—are lined up for the rest of the week and into the next one.

Taken chronologically, they are: A dinner by the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet on Friday evening; a dinner with Mrs. Davies Fitch as hostess on Saturday night. Sunday is a big day with Comdr. and Mrs. Benjamin H. Lingo entertaining at luncheon followed by Marvin Braverman's reception at the Mayflower in the afternoon and Mr. and Mrs. Eric Johnston's dinner that evening.

Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Edward H. Foley, jr., have a dinner party in honor of Mme. Minister Monday evening and President and Mrs. Truman's dinner at Blair House is scheduled for Tuesday night.

In Newport, where Mrs. Mesta maintains her legal residence and where she went on Monday to vote, she was guest of honor at three parties during her brief stay there. Mr. and Mrs. John Drexel, jr., with whom she stayed, entertained at luncheon for her on the day of her arrival. Cornelius Moore gave a large cocktail party that afternoon and that night Mr. and Mrs. Gurnee Dyer were hosts at dinner. On Tuesday Comdr. and Mrs. J. W. Macleary gave a luncheon for her before she took the train for Washington.

Mrs. Mesta and the Italian Undersecretary of State for Agriculture, Emilio Colombo, were the guests in whose honor the Ambassador of Italy and Signora Tarchiani entertained last evening at a dinner at the embassy.

Others in the company were the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais; the Secretary of the United States Senate and Mrs. Leslie L. Biffle; Associate Justice and Mrs. Stanley F. Reed; Norris E. Dodd, director general of FAO; Mrs. Lewis, and Msgr. Bruno Vittori, secretary to the Apostolic Delegate.

Embassy staff members and their wives included the Counselor and Signor Luciolli; Counselor Egidio Ortona and Signora Ortona; Antonio Natale, Counselor of Italian immigration; and Emilio Bettini, Third Secretary, and Signora Bettini.

SHEER LOVELINESS for starlit evenings, as interpreted by Jean Desses. A gown that falls gracefully in flowing motion as the satin tunic sweeps romantically to the back over chiffon. It was one of the highlights of last evening's informal showing at a cocktail party given for M. Desses by Julius Garfinkel & Co.

Addresses Officers Wives

Finletter Stresses Air Force Role in Defense

THE IMPORTANCE of the Air Force in today's fight against communism was brought out in a speech made yesterday by Thomas K. Finletter, Secretary of the Air Force. Members of the Air Force Officers Wives Club were addressed by the Secretary at the monthly meeting held at the Army Navy Country Club.

"From George Washington's farewell address to Pearl Harbor," said the Secretary, "it was the policy of the U. S. to stay out of foreign entanglements. Now, as leaders of the western world, we are taking the leadership in the fight against Communist, and the Air Force plays a leading role in this fight."

He spoke of the two policies the United States is trying to carry out, which appear to be inconsistent: (1) to make the United States so strong in every way that an enemy would have no reason to think she could wage successful war with us; and (2) to pursue with equal vigor a policy of peace that at some time or other will make rearmament unnecessary.

"RESPONSIBILITY FOR the second policy rests with the State Department," he said, "but responsibility for being strong rests with the military." Wives of military men can contribute much to the morale of the armed forces, he went on to point out.

Mrs. Wesley Schott, president of the club, presided, and the speaker was introduced by Mrs. Frank Everest, program chairman. At the luncheon preceding the talk by Secretary Finletter, Mrs. Hoyt Vandenburg, wife of the Air Force Chief of Staff, had as guests at her table Mrs. Finletter, Mrs. Lauris Norstad, Lady Pirie, Mrs. Floyd Odlum, Mrs. Carl Spaatz, Mrs. Ira Eaker and Mrs. Eugene M. Zuckert.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Upbraided as Busybody by Elderly Recluse, Woman Who Is Comparatively New in Neighborhood Asks How To Meet the Situation; Feels Anger and Compassion

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Five years ago my husband and I moved into an old rundown house in a nicer neighborhood than we'd lived in before. Doing the work ourselves, we've greatly improved the looks of the place and we take pride in being here.

The neighbors all seemed nice, friendly people, but we soon learned that sharp gossip abounds, and that hardly any two families were friends of any other two. So we didn't mix too closely with anyone, and until now we were one of three families that spoke to everyone in our block. But today I was assailed by Mrs. X, a quite elderly widow, who accused me of "minding her business," and talking about her to a near neighbor of hers, to whom I've hardly said more than "Hello, nice day."

Mrs. X has one of the largest, best kept homes here. She lived alone with her dog; and I, a newcomer, would stop to praise her flowers as she was working in the yard. Her husband died many years ago and I understand she had a daughter who died quite young.

I soon learned that Mrs. X made life miserable for neighbors with children; so much so that one family moved away, and another would like to. I knew she took undue interest in others' affairs, but I attributed this to lack of close ties, not to malice.

Her dog was killed not long ago, and since then she's become slovenly in her dress, and now she thinks any two neighbors talking together are gossiping about her. In this mood she upbraided me, and she has been actively tale bearing and mischief making towards others, too. She has made things unpleasant for three other families by her fancied wrongs in recent weeks; and her oddities seem to be getting worse. Can anything be done for her?

I am sore about her treatment of me, and maybe I'm trying to strike back this way. I hope not. I think I feel sorry for her. I think her isolation is affecting her mind and she is driving herself deeper in, coming to the door or telephoning to berate folks. She is one of those people who keep the garbage men, street cleaners and park maintenance men on their toes. Perhaps you can say something to help her and us, too. I think she needs company very much. C. E.

DEAR C. E.: It appears that you have been doing enough reading along psychological lines to get the significance of Mrs. X's bothered behavior. The loss of a household pet by cruel accident is enough to embitter a solitary person who relied upon the pet for companionship. And it is natural that she might try to spill out her bitterness some way.

Unthinkingly, she is angry with the environment that killed her dog; with a society so ruinously run, it seems to her; and unconsciously (that is, more or less unawarely) she burns to take some form of revenge, I suppose. That type of reaction, emotionally felt but not thought through, is a "normal" human response to the kind of blow she's sustained.

The sociable dog owner in such case would unburden his tension by lamenting to friends, or by stepping up humane concern for everybody's pets, say by trying to correct conditions that carelessly destroy them. But Mrs. X, being a recluse, living alone without kin (it seems), isn't geared to expend her outrage through sociable channels.

Thus her anger is unconsciously self contained; it gnaws at her vitals, as the saying goes. And by a process known as "projection," she imagines the vindictive feelings that churn in herself are felt by others towards her. That's why she fancies any two neighbors with heads together are talking against her, nowadays.

As to why she specially upbraids you, your letter (here condensed) mentions "trivial words and actions" distorted by her, which may mean that you've remarked, perhaps sympathetically, on her changed appearance or behavior since the dog's death, and that some version of your comments got back to her. Inasmuch as disturbed neurotics characteristically lash out at persons they know best, this would be enough to bring her charging down on your neck.

Yet even if she heard no "gossip" imputed to you, it is axiomatic that any degree of intimacy with neurotics always incurs proportionate friction—unless one is maturely expert in handling them. Thus you unwittingly bade for trouble, sooner or later, when you offered friendship over the fence, praising her flowers.

FOR ADVICE: Instead of taking offense at Mrs. X's explosive distress that she can't define, why not react with Christian charity, since she is a familiar figure and essentially harmless. If she comes to the door to berate, invite her in to sit and rest and explain herself; and offer her a spot of wine, or coffee and cake, or tea and sandwiches. If she telephones to lecture, voice your sincere regret for the "misunderstanding" that disturbs her. And as a good neighbor, you might confidentially notify the Family Service Society (in your city) of her distrait isolated plight, if she has no relatives to befriend her. M. H.

No Matter How You Spell It, You'll Find Yogurt Attracting Lots of Friends

IS IT YOGHURT, yoghourt, yogurt, or yohourt? No matter how you spell it—and all the above are acceptable—it's a healthful, custard-like dish made by fermenting concentrated whole milk. Judging from letters received by this column, more and more people are wanting to make it these days. Here is one query:

DEAR ANNE:

Will you please tell me how to make yogurt using in the formula the product sold commercially under that name? I know that it is cultured, but I believe it can be made at home. However, I do not know what type of milk to use and whether or not it should be heated, etc.

A. M. J., Washington.

The best way to make yogurt at home, I am told by Dr. Lloyd A. Burkey of the United States Department of Agriculture is with the special culture sold for this purpose. This is obtainable here through health food stores. Two stores that have it can be telephoned at Republic 1212 and National 8094. Directions for making the yogurt come with the culture.

A COMBINATION OF SEVERAL kinds of bacteria in this culture is what makes yogurt different from most fermented milks. They give it fine, smooth texture and firm body. Many people, particularly in eastern Mediterranean countries where yogurt has long been popular, credit these bacteria with therapeutic and health-promoting qualities. Yogurt is generally accepted as highly nutritious, very easily digested, and useful in treating dietary conditions.

But to get back to making it: Dr. Burkey says a small amount of the yogurt itself (as sold commercially or prepared at home) can be used as starter for a fresh batch (2 teaspoons to 1 pint milk). However, it is hard to perpetuate a good culture this way, as quality will deteriorate.

Vital in making yogurt is equipment for sterilizing and for maintaining "inoculated" milk at 112 to 115 degrees for about three hours. This is where difficulty arises in making yogurt at home. It can be done in warm water, but it is difficult to maintain an even temperature. Special incubators for this purpose, sold at health stores, are much more satisfactory.

TO GIVE YOU AN IDEA of the steps in making yogurt, here is a brief resume from Dr. Burkey's leaflet, "How to Make Yogurt" (BDIM-Inf-2):

(1) Concentrate highest quality whole milk. One way to do this is to add 5 percent of dry skim milk (by weight) to the whole milk; (2) heat concentrated milk to boiling (212 degrees Fahrenheit) and cool at once to 115 degrees; (3) add 2 percent of starter (2 teaspoons to each pint of milk) with milk at 115 degrees and mix thoroughly; (4) put inoculated milk in small, clean containers with covers. Jelly glasses or custard cups are good, as yogurt can be eaten directly from them; (5) incubate at 112 to 115 degrees in water or incubator for three hours or until coagulation is complete; (6) place containers in refrigerator to cool. It will keep a week if held at 50 degrees or lower.

Independent Spirit Seen In Md. Results

Maryland election results show that the voters are becoming more mature politically and are unwilling to be told how to vote, according to J. Douglas Bradshaw of Takoma Park (Republican), member-elect of the Maryland House of Delegates.

Bradshaw, a Montgomery County councilman, who will represent the county as a delegate, said the county vote on Tuesday showed that the citizens like the charter after its two-year operation and want the government to remain in the hands of those who have favored that form.

The delegate-elect spoke before members of the Chamber of Commerce of Takoma Park at Nelson's restaurant in Takoma Park.

Other counties will adopt the charter form, and in Prince Georges County this will be done very quickly, he declared, though the neighboring county's charter will not necessarily be exactly like the one adopted by Montgomery County, he added.

The Republican State administration will mean that Montgomery County will recapture control of such agencies as the Washington Suburban Sanitary District, the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the county Liquor Control Board, Bradshaw said.

Takoma Park City Councilman Walter McClenon explained the new bill to change the city charter for the city manager form of government. A public hearing on it will be held at 8 p. m. November 14 at the Takoma Park Community Center. Speakers will include Dr. Elwyn Manck of the University of Maryland and Mayor Elizabeth T. Harrington of Greenbelt.

Citizens Seek 'Light' Safety For Children

Because 950 school children cross Rhode Island ave. at 20th st. ne. daily, the Rhode Island Citizens Association, in cooperation with the Fathers' Club of St. Francis de Sales School, moved last night to seek traffic signals at the intersection.

The association reported past efforts to secure the signs have failed.

At the regular monthly meeting held at 3004 Rhode Island ave. ne., the members decided to ask for completion of a field house at Langdon Park playground.

Lieut. John J. Boyd, twelfth precinct police officer, commended the association for its part in Halloween entertainment that greatly cut vandalism. He said no false fire alarms were reported in the precinct.

Couple, 92, Marks 60th Nuptial Date

SHENANDOAH, Va., Nov. 8 (Spl.).—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stanhope Flournoy Chisholm, both 92, will celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary at their home near here November 13.

Both still recall events of the Civil War.

Mrs. Chisholm remembers Union soldiers coming to burn her grandmother's barn, only to be told by her grandmother that it had been struck by lightning and already destroyed. She said her grandmother's mill, tannery and iron foundry was destroyed instead.

Chisholm recalls that his father died of a gunshot wound just a few days before General Lee surrendered.

"This would be our seventieth anniversary instead of the sixtieth," he says, "but I had to wait 10 years to marry because my wife's grandmother and grandfather were alone and needed her."

The couple have two sons, W. W. Chisholm of Fairfax, Va., and H. Lee Chisholm of Washington, and a daughter, Miss Ruth Chisholm, who lives with her parents, and one grandchild.

A family dinner will be held Sunday.

Personnel Forum Tonight

A symposium on job evaluation systems will be held by the Society for Personnel Administration at 7:30 tonight at the National Archives auditorium. Participating will be Boyd Sheddan, Defense Department personnel policy board; William F. Sorensen, jr., Army Department, and William Laxton, Department of Agriculture.

Public to Visit County Jail With Officials

The cream of Arlington officialdom will be behind bars in the County Jail tonight.

Not that Arlington's leaders have misbehaved. They will be voluntary "guests" at the christening of Arlington's new push-button jail on the third floor of the recently finished courthouse wing.

The open-house—or, open-jail—will be observed from 7:30 to 10:30 p. m. today and Friday, Sheriff J. Elwood Clements said, and all day Saturday.

Tonight, the public is invited to join such officials as County Manager A. T. Lundberg, Clements and his staff, Trial Justice Hugh Reid and County Board members for refreshments and a voluntary tour of the jail.

Clements yesterday listed these features of the new calaboose:

It will hold 80 prisoners compared with about 35 in Arlington's antique former jail; juveniles will be separated from adult offenders, male inmates from female prisoners, misdemeanors from felony cases, first offenders from hardened criminals. Each class of inmates will be lodged in a completely separate jail section.

Doors to the various cellblocks, and to each cell door, can be operated by remote control by guards; recreation space in each cell block and an exercise area on the jail roof have been provided.

Also present at the opening ceremony tonight will be James Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, and Rice Youell, director of Virginia's State Bureau of Correction.

Postlude

Bloch Cello Work Given Top Reading

By Paul Hume

Howard Mitchell, John Martin and the National Symphony Orchestra turned in a virtuoso evening for the season's third Wednesday night concert at Constitution Hall.

Mitchell programmed a beautifully balanced list of music running through Haydn, Wagner, Bloch, and Hinemith. The orchestra gave some of its most thrilling work of the new year, and its young cellist, Martin, covered himself with new glory.

Bloch's rhapsody for cello and orchestra, Schelomo, based on the character of King Solomon, has unique connections with Washington. Hans Kindler was the cellist at its world premiere in 1917. And during his years conducting here, Kindler conducted it with Mitchell as soloist. Now, in his turn, Mitchell conducted it for his young successor as the orchestra's first cellist.

Martin gave the music his most intense, poised playing. It is music that takes far more than mere notes. Its spirit must be present in any performance or the point is lost. Last night, with the orchestra playing tremendous support, the music came out with true splendor.

In the D Major Symphony, No. 101, Mitchell found the spirit, and his men displayed the tone and technique. True, there were the briefest moments when things just missed absolute perfection. But the imperative spirit was present. Tempos, especially in the crucial "clock movement," and the floating finale were models.

The Rhine Journey deserved and got a great reception. So did John Martin and Howard Mitchell. Here was an outstanding concert—but so was last week's. What a fine habit!

Loren B. Poush To Be Presented Service Award

Loren B. Poush, civilian legal assistant to the Navy Surgeon General, will be presented a 20-year service award pin here today, it was announced last night.

Poush

Poush, who lives at 5447 N. Carlyn Spring rd., Arlington, Va., entered federal service as an enlisted man in the Navy in October, 1930.

Subsequent employment included service as an examiner in the Civil Service Commission and World War II Navy service with amphibious forces in the Solomon Islands and the landing on Bougainville Island.

Released from active duty in 1945, with the rank of a lieutenant commander, he has since been attached to an active volunteer Reserve unit at the Potomac River Naval Command.

AEC Men to Discuss Church's Labor Role

A panel discussion on "Does the Church Have a Role in Labor-Management Relations?" will be held at a dinner meeting of the Brotherhood of Reformation Lutheran Church at 6:30 tonight at the parish hall of the church, 212 E. Capitol st.

Two staff members of the Atomic Energy Commission will participate. They are Oscar Smith, director of labor relations, and H. C. Reasin, chief of the contractor reimbursement division.

100 ACRES SOLD FOR DEVELOPMENT

This property is located about 4 squares beyond the District line in Southeast in the zone of the new South Capitol st. bridge. This bridge is operating with a capacity of 50,000 automobiles a day. It is bringing this acreage within about 5 minutes of the White House. Now the big news today is that Sears & Roebuck, the great department house people, has just purchased a large tract of land in this neighborhood to erect a big department store. Ground on Wisconsin ave., right close to their store there is now worth a million dollars an acre, and they will make it worth a million dollars an acre in this neighborhood. Proposed to build another bridge from Virginia across the Potomac to this neighborhood, Baltimore blvd. is coming down to this locality and this will be one of the greatest shopping centers in Greater Washington. You can look for this ground to bring in a million dollars an acre in the very near future. You will wonder why I will sell it. I am in my 84th year and I am settling my estate. It's a young man's job to subdivide and handle a large tract of land. This property can be had now at the small sum of $4,000 an acre. It's all paid for and I can give you favorable terms. FULTON R. GORDON, Owner. OL. 4408. Let me hear from you and will be very glad to hear from brokers, too.

Secret Service

Though the Secret Service was established in 1865, only three months after Lincoln's death, the murder of the President was not the cause of its creation. It was organized primarily for the detection of counterfeiters . . . It was not until McKinley was shot and killed in Buffalo in 1901 that it took over the protection of the President in earnest.

In the 20th Century the precautions for the guarding of the President are as elaborate as they were casual in the 19th Century. Yet a certain desperation attends it; it is reflected in all our Presidents by a fatalism. They assume the danger as a calculated risk of the office; the risk is minimized as much as possible, but absolute safety is out of the question, so they simply proceed on schedule. FDR was even gay about it: "If they want you, they'll get you; but they'll never drive me to living like a hunted man."

This, of course, isn't the tradition abroad. There are no permanent passes to the Kremlin. There are no unescorted visitors—and there aren't many visitors . . . Tito, right now, solved his problem by going to an island and holing up. No American President would think of doing that any more than he would think of lowering the flag on the White House.

The Secret Service, on at least one occasion, turned the whole course of international history. In 1915 Sec'y McAdoo ordered it to investigate German violation of U. S. neutralities. It spectacularly accomplished its mission in a thriller still known in the Intelligence schools as "The Affair of the Missing Brief Case." This case resulted in the general practice of chaining dispatch boxes to the couriers; also in the admonition to young intelligence officers: "Always look back in the taxicab when you get out; you may have left your court-martial on the seat."

This is what happened: On July 24, 1915, Secret Service agents were shadowing George Sylvester Viereck and Dr. Heinrich S. Albert, both of the German propaganda machine. They boarded the elevated at the Battery. At 50th St. and 6th Avenue Dr. Albert left the train and forgot his brief case. He was on the platform when suddenly he remembered it and rushed back on the train. But Frank Burke of the Secret Service was already out the other door, the brief case under his arm. With grim hilarity, as the train started out, the frantic Germans were searching the cars while the man for whom they were looking was on the platform they had just left.

The contents of that brief case crystalized Woodrow Wilson's mind against the Kaiser's Imperial government. It proved by documents that the Germans planned to buy United States newspapers; that Viereck was already publishing "The Fatherland," and was being paid $1500 a month out of the Germany Embassy. It revealed extensive plans to corner cotton and liquid chlorine for gas and to buy the Wright Aeronautical Corp. But what really threw the President was that the documents proved the Germans already owned a large munitions plant in Bridgeport, Conn., manufacturing faulty shells for the British!

The New York World broke the story, but not until 1931 did McAdoo reveal how the United States got the documents, because the Secret Service is Secret. Its files show it was often "borrowed" by other departments. For example, it broke the Teapot Dome investigation by order of President Coolidge.

Its chief duty is not its chief fear. Only cranks and crackpots crudely try to assassinate the President; but every major power tries desperately and with all the aids of modern science "to penetrate" the entourage of any ruler of any major power. It simply wants to know what the ruler is going to do next—because history turns so much on a half dozen men that there is this famous axiom: That there is no such thing as general history—only a few biographies.

France and Great Britain have maintained Secret Intelligence bureaus for 400 years, and their archives contain more world history than the text books. For example, the French have charged Waterloo was lost because Napoleon's reserves were commanded by a French marshal—who was a British agent!

The United States tradition forbids this sort of activity. In 1918 Maj. Fiorello LaGuardia informed Secretary of State Lansing in code that Hungarian revolutionaries had asked for assistance from the allied powers. The shocked Sec'y of State answered severely that the United States fought for principles and in principle it was opposed to any revolutions, even in the territory of its enemy!

Because Major LaGuardia could speak seven languages, so that their common people could understand him, Pershing recognized him as a one-man Intelligence Service. This is a secret chapter which died with both of them. The Allies were desperate for chromium; the fate of the war hung on it. Pershing summoned LaGuardia, who told him that if the credit of the United States was placed at his disposal, he would get it—even from behind the enemy's lines. He did. Fiorello left Paris, disappeared in Switzerland and reappeared out of the sea off Genoa—in command of 4 ships loaded to the water line with the precious metal. The secret of how he got it died with LaGuardia, and Pershing always respected the confidence. The only clue was a British Intelligence report—handed to LaGuardia—which said that his double had appeared in Barcelona as a stevedore. LaGuardia grinned: "I've always believed that a pair of overalls is more effective than an officer's puttees!"

Penetration reached a peak in World War I. As a classic example, this story is told of the Battle of Jutland: With the whole Royal Navy engaged in full action with the entire German fleet, during the battle Admiral Beatty was flashed the message that his broadside had sunk the German cruiser Blucher. "That's terrible," he said. "Her staff officer was the best agent in British Intelligence and worth any 6 cruisers."

There are top Intelligence men who will swear to this, too. That Allied Intelligence knew the July plan of German officers to kill Hitler was coming off. FDR ordered that the Allies take no part in it. "It's all right for Germans to kill Hitler," he said, "but we're not fighting the same Hitler they are. We are fighting the Hitler in the minds of the German people. For us to help assassinate him is to enshrine him there as a martyr and will give them an alibi for their defeat as supermen. Accordingly, it is forbidden that any Intelligence Service further any plan for killing Hitler. This demi-god is going down at the head of his troops, because only the ashes of Berlin will prove to the Germans that he had feet of clay!"

Sanders Can't See Live Shows on TV

By John Crosby

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—And what was George Sanders feeling strongly about today? Women? In 1946 he quoted, "A woman, a dog, a walnut tree—the more you beat them the better they be."

No. Today it was television.

Sanders

"I'm one of the people who believe that television is just a projection room in your house," he said. "It will never be any good for anything but current events and movies. I don't believe in live shows on television.

"When you have a screen, you have to have screen techniques, which means cutting into close-ups. You never can do that as effectively on live shows as with film."

He mentioned the problem of rearranging lights in close-ups and long shots to make an actor look attractive or in character.

"You cannot have the same lighting in the close-up as in the long shot. I see actors look so horrible (in live TV) you can't even see the expression on their faces.

"There's a sense of confinement when you see a live show. The camera can't move outside—into an automobile—into a train—as you can in movies. And the guy is always in the same suit."

Live-show TV actors are apt to be underrehearsed and fluff their lines, he feels.

"They get in line with each other. You can never place them properly. As a viewer of television, I don't bother to turn live shows on any more."

The actor manufactures custom-built TV receivers on the side. So, he added, "I believe in the future of television."

He thinks a device to permit tele-viewers to pay for seeing good movies at home would provide "the millennium."

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 3 (AP).—The man with one of the most familiar voices in radio is on his way to becoming one of the most familiar faces in the movies.

He is Basil Ruysdael. It was his distinguished voice that delivered those repeat commercials on the Jack Benny, Kay Kyser and Hit Parade programs.

"People hated me," he admits. "Sometimes I even hated myself."

For 14 years, Ruysdael droned out the catch slogans, flanked by tobacco auctioneers. He was a favorite of the late George Washington Hill, whom he never met.

Ruysdael has had a number of careers since he finished studying electrical engineering at Cornell. He was a tool maker in a machine shop (he now has his own shop and proudly displays patents on his inventions). He was a Marine in the First World War.

He sang at the Metropolitan with his friend, Enrico Caruso. He cavorted with the Marx Brothers in "Coconuts" and with the Duncan Sisters in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." At 40 he turned to intoning commercials on the air.

A couple of years ago, he began his latest and most successful career at the age of 60. He had moved out to Hollywood to do his broadcasting. The brother of a neighbor turned out to be an agent, who suggested that Ruysdael try pictures.

"I've done 15 pictures in 23 months," he reported. "I've worked every day for the last 86 days."

Among his films have been "Come to the Stable," "Pinky," "Broken Arrow," "Raton Pass," "High Lonesome" and "Carrie," which he just completed.

Asked how he accounted for his success, he replied, "Good agent."

Herblock Returns From Vacation Trip

Washington Post readers should be a contented lot again this morning. Cartoonist Herblock, missing too long from our editorial page, is scheduled to resume his labors today after several weeks of vacation.

Fortunately, Herb enjoyed his vacation—even if we didn't. He flew out West, rubbernecked around Colorado, New Mexico and Texas, and then joined his brother for an auto trip down the Pan American Highway to Mexico City.

On the way back, he stopped off in New Orleans and headed straight for Antoine's to sample their famous Oysters a la Rockefeller.

But the menu was in French, a language with which Mr. Block is fluently unfamiliar. So he turned to the couple at the next table and said: "Pardon me, but I can't read this menu. I wonder if you could help me."

"We're also having trouble," confessed the other chap. "We're not from New Orleans—we're from Washington, D. C."

They were Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Francis of 2640 44th st. nw. Frank is half of the Francis and Parsons auto firm at Nichols ave. and V st. se., and both he and his wife are loyal District Liners and Post readers.

"It's a small world, isn't it?" I said, without too much originality.

"It sure is," agreed Herb. "Our trip to Mexico will serve as a good example. And, incidentally, we sure loved those prices in Mexico. You get a fraction over eight pesos for your dollar, and live like a king. We ate practically all our meals in the swankiest restaurants, where everything 'flames' and the customers dress for dinner.

"But, getting back to my story, I was looking for a certain street in Mexico City and having a hard time, because the only Spanish I know is about 10 words I got out of one of those phrase books they recommend for tourists.

"I picked a likely looking chap and tried out my 10 words on him, but I couldn't make him understand what I wanted. So I dug down into the book for more words, and threw in a few gestures for good measure.

"This time I succeeded in getting across the idea that I was looking for a certain address, but the guy still wasn't very helpful.

"He just shrugged his shoulders and said: 'Ya got me, bud. I'm a stranger here myself.'"

In Suit Theft

Nutmegger Convicted by Low Pockets

Alfred Joseph Demers, 18, of Thomaston, Conn., who yesterday earned the title of "low pockets," will spend the next six months in District Jail.

Demers, who is five feet nine inches tall, was convicted in Municipal Court of bringing a stolen suit into the city. The suit was stolen in New York from William R. Bailey, of 4346 Alton pl. nw.

Bailey happens to be about five inches shorter than Demers, so naturally it was a poor fit on Demers. Demers insisted that he had purchased the suit for $3 from a pawnshop. Judge George D. Neilson had Demers try the suit on.

When the defendant reappeared from the cell block, the trousers were almost long enough. But then, Prosecutor Alfred Hantman had Demers lift his sweater.

Demers had slung the pants so they hung from four inches below the waistline.

To Talk on Conservation

Sidney S. Kellam, director of the Virginia State Department of Conservation and campaign manager last year for Gov. John S. Battle, will speak on conservation at a meeting of the Democratic Club of Arlington tonight. The meeting is at 8:15 p. m. at the Lyon Park Community House.

Retail Food Prices Climb In District

Retail food prices in Washington went up 3/10ths of one percent between September 15 and October 15, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported last night.

Higher prices were recorded for dairy products, eggs, fish, coffee, canned fruits and vegetables, cereals and bakery products. These were partly offset by decreases for meats, poultry, fresh fruits and vegetables, sugar, fats and oils.

Prices were higher for 32 items, lower for 16 and two were unchanged.

The price of eggs jumped 11½ percent, more than usual for the period. Coffee prices reached record high for the third consecutive month.

Offsetting the BLS report, the Associated Press reported that changes in retail food prices were mostly downward this week. Eggs, the Associated Press said, were down 2 to 5 cents a dozen, and several brands of coffee reduced prices 1 to 3 cents a pound. Beef eased as much as 6 cents a pound in some areas. Chickens were 1 to 4 cents a pound lower.

Balloon Bursts, Suffocates Boy, 6

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 8 (AP).—A balloon which burst and was carried into his windpipe last night caused the death of a 6-year-old Chesterfield County boy.

Young Crafton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer James Crafton, was pronounced dead at Medical College Hospital last night.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three-year-old housebroken Boston bull needs room to run." (Jordan 9-9458.)

"Cute 8-week-old black kitten." (Emerson 7889.)

"Kittens, born August 17; prefer to give them in pairs at least, because they're so used to playing as a team." (Georgia 1238.)

"Half-Persian mother cat and 4-month-old part-Persian male kittens, accustomed to outdoor life." (Columbia 3993.)

"Three 7-week-old kittens." (Falls Church 6246.)

LIVE AND LEARN

Last Saturday I included here a mention of a chicken fry and barbecue to be held the next day at the Hybla Valley Airport for the benefit of the Fairfax County Safety Patrols.

I knew that a lot of youngsters are enrolled in the Safety Patrol program (including my own), but I had no idea as to the extent of the work until I got a letter of thanks yesterday from Walter W. Hubbard of the American Automobile Association. He wrote, in part:

"Police, P-TA groups and boards of education are cooperating to help these 6500 Washington area boys and girls in their training, and the AAA supplies them with their badges and belts. The idea started a third of a century ago and in that short time has spread all over the Nation and now includes 483,000 "sentinels of safety" who unselfishly serve their schoolmates every school day of the year."

MODERN PHILOSOPHER

Mrs. K. F. Walker of 4210 Argyle ter. nw. sends in a couple of outdated streetcar tokens to be forwarded to Children's Hospital, and adds that she likes my "sermons" about traffic safety. She says they remind her of the oft-quoted jingle:

Here lies the body of William Jay . . . Who died maintaining his right of way . . . He was right—dead right— as he drove along . . . But he's just as dead as if he'd been wrong.

GRACIE ALLEN?

Harry Nussbaum, whose sign shop is at 518 Forest Glen rd., Silver Spring, Md., passes along a story from one of the hardware merchants in the neighborhood.

A woman called the hardware store the other day and asked: "Do you carry any of that dehumidifier stuff that's used to dry out a house?"

"Yes, we do," the storekeeper assured her.

"Do you have the size that would be used in a room 10 feet by 14 feet?" inquired the caller.

"We sure do," replied the merchant.

"Oh, I'm sorry," said the woman, "I just happened to remember that my room is 14 feet by 20 feet, so I couldn't use it." And with that, she hung up.

A-Bomb Unbalance Prevents War

By Drew Pearson

The final decision as to how far the Russo-Chinese alliance will go toward all-out world war will depend largely on one factor—how many atomic bombs we have, compared with the number Russia has.

Pearson

The preponderance of atomic weapons in our favor continues to be the most reassuring thing in the otherwise unhappy international picture.

For definite information has been obtained that Russia has been able to manufacture only 24 atomic bombs and is making them only at the rate of two per month.

On the other hand, the American atomic stockpile, while a secret, is vastly greater. Furthermore, our rate of production is much faster.

This superiority of atomic strength has been the main factor deterring the Soviet from world war up to now, and the chances are it will continue to be a deterrent in the future. It is also why the Russians have adopted the policy of wearing down American resources by wars of attrition in which satellite nations, not the Red army, do the fighting.

In brief, it is likely that the Kremlin will not risk a major war in which Russian troops must do battle and in which Russian cities are exposed—until there is a better balance between our atomic stockpile and Moscow's.

Guarding Truman

Until the recent attempt on his life, President Truman had given little thought to his personal safety. He once told my assistant, Fred Blumenthal, that he had figured out what he would do if an assassin came into the room. Most assassins, he said, would expect the President to get under the desk, but he was planning to reverse things and attack the attacker—just as Andrew Jackson did when attacked in the halls of Congress . . . When last week's shooting started, Mrs. Truman rushed into the President's bedroom where he was napping, to tell him a Secret Service man was lying wounded on the street. Actually she mistook assassin Collazo for a plain-clothes man . . . One Secret Service man was in front of Blair House at the time of the shooting, the others were in the rear eating lunch. The White House police, which bore the brunt of the attack, are under the Secret Service . . . The Secret Service have been under some criticism in recent years for having become partially political. Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan intervened in the early days of the Truman Administration, fired Mike Reilly, who operated under Roosevelt, and gave the impression he wanted to run the service. This would not have been tolerated in the old days of Chief William Moran . . . Later, during the Senate five-percenter probe, Reilly was hastily rehired and given a $10,000 job in the Interior Department. (He knew too much about how the Secret Service gave a special pass to Vaughan's friend, John Maragon, and about other political wirepulling.) . . . Despite occasional politics, however, the Secret Service does a good job.

Marines' Birthday

Tomorrow, November 10, happens to be the Marine Corps' 175th birthday. That's a lot of years — and glorious years — to have been fighting for the country. So it might be a good idea for radio stations across the Nation to play an occasional reminder of the Marine Corps' stirring hymn in commemoration of a great birthday.

Problem for U. N.

The North Korean-Manchurian area is an ideal one for United Nations cooperation—if Moscow would permit it. Reason is that the Japs, which once controlled both Korea and Manchuria, developed power and industry regardless of international boundaries, just as Grand Coulee and Bonneville dams serve several States, regardless of State boundaries . . . Seven major dams are reported on the Yalu River between Manchuria and North Korea. The Suiho Dam, one of the largest in the world, is 328 feet high, 2788 feet long, has a reservoir 40 miles long and delivers 700,000 kilowatts of power . . . Another dam, Mamposhin, delivers 234,000 kw. The total system, when completed, will produce two-million kilowatts and will operate industries as far south as Port Arthur at the southernmost tip of Manchuria . . . Two other reservoirs are south of the Yalu River, wholly in North Korean territory, and about 20 miles north of the present U. N. front. It was about the time U. N. troops approached these reservoirs that Chinese troops crossed the border . . . The only possible way these power projects can be operated is under some form of United Nations control, since they are located in and supply power to two countries.

Behind the Iron Curtain

Scientist escapes—Bruno Pontecorvo, the Italian-born British atom scientist, had the full cooperation of the OGPU in escaping behind the Iron Curtain . . . Pontecorvo drove his car to Copenhagen and left it there while he and his family took the North Express to Stockholm. From Stockholm they flew by plane to Helsinki. The Russian freighter Beloostrov had been scheduled to sail at 10:40 a. m. September 5. It waited until 5 p. m. and sailed the minute the Pontecorvo family was on board.

Red Army Chiefs Meet—The American Legation reports that a mysterious meeting of eastern European Communist bosses is now going on at the Russian resort town of Sochi in the Crimea. This is Prime Minister Stalin's favorite hideway and it's believed he may be present. A number of Polish and Romanian generals are known to be present and American diplomats believe the subject being discussed is how to bring greater coordination between the satellite armies.

Tension in Iran—United States Ambassador Grady has cabled from Tehran that the Russian radio across the border in Azerbaijan is warning Iranians to get ready to welcome a Russian army.

Soviet Tanks — The United States Army in Germany has reported to the Pentagon that Russia's tanks and artillery and even the firepower of her troops far surpass those of the United States. This report, based on detailed examination of Russian weapons, says that the United States has no heavy tank that will compare with the Joseph Stalin III tank mounting a powerful 122-millimeter gun. Even more disturbing, the report says the firepower of the Russian divisions of only 11,000 men is almost equal to the firepower of our much larger divisions of 18,860 men.
